Dutch Consul General Says Queen to Be Here April 5th for 300th Anniversary

Elizabeth Is Proclaimed Queen; Will Carry On Work as Her Father Did

Thousands in Mourning Sing the New National Anthem, God Save the Queen

King's Body Is Taken to Parish Church Near Residence

London, Feb. 8 (AP) — Young Elizabeth II humbly promised today to "always work as my father did" for the happiness of her people and was proclaimed Queen of the British realm, territories and commonwealth. Then she left London to go to the bier of her father, King George VI.

A triple fanfare of trumpets signalled the accession of a new Queen to packed thousands in a ceremony dating back to the days of chivalry in front of historic St. James's Palace.

As a medieval-clad figure finished reading the proclamation from the balcony at 11 a. m., the sombre thousands, in mourning for the late King George VI, stood at attention and sang the majestic national anthem—now "God Save the Queen."

Artillery salutes boomed, and a clattering pageant-like procession of hearlds spread the news.

Heart Is Sad

In a moving little speech to her councillors at the accession ceremony a few minutes before, the 25-year-old Queen said:

"My heart is too full for me to say more to you today than that I shall always work, as my father did throughout his reign, to uphold constitutional government and to advance the happiness and prosperity of my peoples, spread as they are to all the world over. * * * I pray that God will help me to discharge worthily this heavy task that has been laid upon me so early in my life."

Thus began the reign of the second "Good Queen Bess."

Then she and her 30-year-old husband, the Duke of Edinburgh left Clarence House, their home, for the 130-mile trip to Sandringham to visit for the first time the bier of her father whose death early Wednesday called her back 4,000 miles from East Africa and a royal tour.

Her First Smile

As the royal limousine rolled through the palace gates the young queen smiled for the first time since her return and waved to a waiting crowd.

The dead king's coffin will be carried along a garden path behind a sackcloth screen from Sandringham this evening to the little parish church nearby. There in the centuries-old church the king's own gamekeepers, dressed in traditional uniforms something like those of Robin Hood, will keep vigil until a short service Monday.

Until the movement of the coffin, the body remained on a candle-lit bier in a dimly lit bedroom at Sandringham, where the king died unexpectedly in his sleep Wednesday morning.

Reads Proclamation

Bearded Sir George Bellew, 50-year-old Garter King-of-Arms, dressed in medieval costume, read the proclamation of the Accession Council from the balcony of St. James's. It said:

"Whereas it hath pleased Almighty God to call at his mercy our late sovereign lord King George VI of blessed and glorious memory, by whose decease the crown is solely and rightfully come to the high and mighty

Taft Is Challenged To Win Delegates In New Hampshire

Is Sure if He Wins 4 or 5 Indication Will Be Eisenhower Not So Popular

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—Senator Duff (R.-Pa.) today challenged Senator Taft (R.-Ohio) to go after an all-out victory in the March 11 New Hampshire presidential primary.

Duff's challenge came after Taft told a radio audience (MBS) last night that if he gets four or five of the 14 New Hampshire GOP convention, the result will deflate claims that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has great popular appeal with the voters.

Calling this "poppycock," Duff, one of the leaders in the Eisenhower presidential drive, told this reporter:

"When Senator Taft submits himself for a fight, he ought not to fix himself for a fall."

A full slate of Eisenhower delegates has been entered in New Hampshire with Gov. Sherman Adams and other state GOP leaders plugging vigorously for the general.

Taft said with this backing the Eisenhower forces got "a good start" over the group of delegates running for him. Since the GOP party machinery in the state is in the hands of the general's admirers he said he will regard it as "satisfactory," if four or five of his supporters are elected.

Questions Strength

"I think that Eisenhower's popularity isn't as widespread as some people seem to think," he said.

Although Duff would not comment, other Eisenhower backers are not claiming they will elect all the 14 New Hampshire delegates. The race is between Taft and Eisenhower since Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota is running only in the preferential primary, a popularity contest, and has filed no delegates slate.

Taft told the radio audience he thinks he would run just as well in the south as Eisenhower in November. He said the general's reputed Dixie popularity might be strained if he took a stand on FEPC, the Taft-Hartley Law and other issues.

The Ohio senator said he resents a statement by New York state Chairman William Pfeiffer that Taft's nomination would mean the loss of the state by the Republicans.

"He has no right to say that—it isn't true," Taft declared heatedly. "That is only an argument that gives a defeatist tone to the whole campaign."

Thinks Democrats Will Beat Taft, Candidate He Sees Winning Nomination

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—President Truman's announcement that he is going to let the political river take its course, with a little steering now and then, was interpreted in some administration circles today as indicating he does not plan to run again.

It has been learned authoritatively by this reporter that some of Truman's closest friends now do not believe he will seek renomination — barring unforeseen developments.

One of these friends, who can not be named, told me that while the President apparently hasn't confided his decision to anyone, the inner circle of his associates looks for him to step aside at the proper time and name his choice for the nomination.

Says Ike Won't Run

The President was said to feel the chances are diminishing that the Republicans will nominate Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Believing as he does that Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio is the likely GOP choice, Truman was reported to feel that the Democrats have a good chance to win next November's election. If that looks reasonably certain, friends said Truman will be happy to retire from the scene.

The President was depicted as realizing that some other northern Democratic candidate would be likely to command more support in the south than he could because of the antagoism over his civil rights program.

On the other hand, Truman apparently is fully cognizant of the widespread view among Democratic leaders that he is their best candidate—as of now.

Signal He's Through

As part of his program of letting the political river take its course, he seemingly is giving some other Democrats their chance to demonstrate what they can do. This may apply to Senator Kerr (D-Okla.), in a limited way, and to Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois.

But there seems a strong determination within the close circle of Truman friends that the nominee won't be Senator Kefauver (D-Tenn.) if they can help it. They feel Kefauver would not appeal to the south and would have only partial support from the party's self-styled "liberals."

Kefauver has challenged Truman in the March 11 New Hampshire primary. And it is there that the President told a news conference yesterday he will let the river take its course.

Truman Insists 2 Secretaries Not to Blame for Scandals

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—President Truman insists that neither Secretary of Agriculture Brannan nor Secretary of the Treasury Snyder can be blamed for scandals which have hit their departments.

He stoutly defended both cabinet members at his news conference yesterday.

The President disputed charges by Senator Williams (R.-Del.) that Snyder has not been aggressive enough in cleaning up the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Williams said in a Senate speech he knew of no evidence that Snyder had brought charges against any bureau officials who might have been guilty of condoning corruption.

Williams said there have been three major resignations in the Internal Revenue Bureau—Commissioner George J. Schoeneman, Assistant Commissioner Daniel A. Bolich, and Chief Counsel Charles Oliphant — "all for reasons of health."

"In not a single instance has the secretary preferred charges or even indicated that any of these men might be guilty of any impropriety," Williams declared.

Williams contended that Snyder had been personally notified about conditions in the Third Internal Revenue District in New York long before Collector James W. Johnson was fired.

What Williams would like, the President said, is to have all the internal revenue collectors fired so Republicans could be put into the jobs.

Mr. Truman told newsmen that Brannan could not be blamed for the multi-million dollar shortages reported in government grain reserves. He said—without naming anyone—that these grain fellows had been doing the stealing.

Says Reds Plan Big Jet Armada

Tokyo, Feb. 8 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Otto P. Weyland says if Allied air strikes are halted the Reds could mount a tremendous jet armada from North Korean airfields within 30 days.

The Far East air forces commander said in an interview yesterday the Communists have 15 good airfields which could be put into shape without much engineering effort.

All are located near supply points such as railroads or seaports, he added.

The Reds have insisted on the right to rebuild airfields during an armistice.

Ulster Will Join Kingston to Get Industry in Area

Will Check Law Relating to Stock Car Races; Discuss Buying Equipment

At a meeting of the town board of the town of Ulster held last evening Supervisor Percy Bush was authoribed to appoint an Industrial Committee to meet with the Kingston Chamber of Commerce and the Kingston city officials and see what can be done toward furtherance of industrial locations in this area.

Of late numerous concerns have inquired as to possible large tracts of land for industrial purposes. These concerns are interested in areas in or near the city which have railroad facilities and also suitable public utilities available.

Supervisor Bush named on the committee to work with him, Councilmen John Acker, Donald Parish and Justices Harold Macholdt and Clarence Rappleyea, Town Attorney Lloyd R. LeFever, Pratt Boice and Weidner H. Davis.

To Study Code

The board also authorized Supervisor Bush to name a committee to study the State Building Code and ascertain if the town building code was in accord with the state code or to recommend suitable changes if necessary. On

Trunk Murderess Back in Hospital

Winnie Ruth Judd Admits Help in Fifth Escape; Face Battered

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 8 (AP) — Trunk murderess Winnie Ruth Judd, scratched and battered looking, returned voluntarily to the state mental hospital under mysterious circumstances last night.

She surrendered at the home of the hospital superintendent with the brief comment:

"Well, I'm back."

It was the fifth escape for the fading "Tiger Woman" who 21 years ago killed two girl friends and shipped their dismembered bodies to Los Angeles.

Dr. M. W. Conway, the hospital superintendent, said she acknowledged she had received outside help in fleeing last Saturday night.

He also said Mrs. Judd appeared to have had "a face lifting." He did not elaborate on her appearance.

Dr. Dean Archer, clinical director, said later Mrs. Judd was "scratched and battered looking." He said her eyebrows had been plucked and her already dyed hair had been newly tinted.

Wanted to See Jury

All day there had been reports that she would give herself up if she could talk to the county grand jury.

It was learned that two unidentified men and two equally unidentified state hospital employes had conferred about the hour she would surrender.

The fading "Tiger Woman" apparently was driven by automobile about midnight to the home of the asylum superintendent just outside the grounds of the big asylum.

The car which Dr. Conway said he was sure brought her back had disappeared without anyone getting a look at it.

Winnie Ruth, now 48, escaped the gallows by 72 hours in 1933 when she was adjudged insane after being convicted of first degree murder.

Lack of Animals Is Handicap to Work On Cancer Plans

Two Speakers Ask Support of Bill to Impound Stray Dogs for Medical Use

From World War 2 to the present the United States has had an unprecedented degree of medical research, but the major efforts in fields of military and civilian research "are slowing to a stop because experimental animals are not available," Dr. C. P. Rhoads, director of Memorial Cancer Center in New York, said in a talk here Thursday noon.

Addressing members of the Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions clubs and the Ulster County Medical Society, Dr. Rhoads and Dr. Frederick S. Philips of the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research asked support for the Hatch-Metcalf bill in the state Legislature. The bill would set up a strictly regulated policy to available for medical research.

Many Were Gassed

"In New York city alone," Dr. Rhoads said, "in a single year 69,000 dogs and 150,000 cats, unwanted and abandoned, were gassed, while medical and atomic research projects went begging."

He pointed out that animals as well as humans benefit from the experimental use of the animals. Better ways of treating dogs and cats were devised through the same research that leads to better methods of treating humans, he said.

Dr. Rhoads and Dr. Philips emphasized that the research centers do not want to use pets, or registered animals. The proposed bill, in fact, would protect the pets by making available to research the animals that would be disposed of in city pounds. At present, Dr. Philips said, research centers must buy animals from out-of-state dealers, some of whom use questionable methods in rounding up animals for sale.

Stresses Research

In answer to a question by Senator Arthur H. Wicks, Dr. Rhoads pointed out that present laws require all institutions which use experimental animals to be licensed and inspected. Any experiments causing pain must be done with the animal under anasthetics, the same as would be used for humans.

The importance of medical research was stressed by Dr. Rhoads, who pointed out today that we are faced by a potential enemy that is developing improved explosives, improved poison gas, biological warfare methods, and atomic energy.

"To know how good our protective measures are, we must use experimental animals," he said.

About 200 members of the three service clubs and the medical society attended the meeting, which was held at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

School Parking, Other Matters on Board Slate

Fowler's Motion To Sell School Is Backed by Board

Taxpayers Group Attending Session Asks Action to Relieve Money Burden on Them

The Kingston Board of Education took the first step Thursday evening toward sale of the No. 1 school building which is no longer being used for school purposes since the opening of the Washington school.

Trustee Fowler moved that the corporation counsel be empowered to draw up necessary legal documents complying with the Education Law and that the property be advertised for sale at public auction or otherwise disposed of under the provisions of the law. The motion was approved.

At the meeting of the board Thursday evening a delegation of three women was in attendance and Mrs. Adele Bregman spoke as their representative.

Talks as Taxpayer

Mrs. Bregman advocated disposal of the school buildings not being used for school purposes and the application of funds derived from the sale toward the reduction of the taxpayers' burden for school purposes. She said the property owners should be considered. School taxes were high and she asked that some relief be given. She said sale of unused school buildings would bring in a sum which should be used toward reduction of school costs.

The proposal to proceed with the sale of the No. 1 building on Wilbur avenue had been adopted prior to her speaking and she endorsed the plan, saying it should be sold for the "high dollar" at a public sale and the proceeds applied to the school budget.

No. 1 was closed last fall and the pupils transferred to No. 8 until that school was closed recently and the student body transferred to the Washington School.

Says Troops Took Island

Taipeh, Formosa, Feb. 8 (AP)—The semi-official Tato News Agency said today Nationalist guerrillas stormed the island town of Tungshan in junks last month and held it 19 days. Tungshan lies off the Red China coast opposite Nationalist Formosa.

Area Residents Declare Autos Block Property, Form Hazard for Children

Parking in the vicinity of the new Washington School will be studied by the Board of Education and Superintendent of Schools Arthur J. Laidlaw with the idea of relieving present confusion. Pending the completion of parking facilities for the teaching staff on the school grounds as soon as construction is completed, cars of the staff as well as workmen engaged on the job will have to be accommodated off the premises.

This off premises parking has created congestion in the immediate area of the school and property owners submitted a complaint to the board Thursday evening.

Four residents of the area wrote on their own behalf and for others in the area, complaining that cars stand parked along their property from 8 until 4:30 every day and prevent them from using parking facilities in front of their own property. One, who conducts a beauty parlor in the area, stated clients have complained of inability to find place to park when they visited the beauty parlor. The all day parking also created a traffic hazard and a dangerous situation involving children attending the school.

Plan for Spring

President Clarence Rowland stated that the board had a plan to on-premises parking of staff cars but this parking area could not be completed until spring. Meanwhile he said the workmen at the school as well as the teachers were parking on the street.

The matter was referred to the superintendent to study and seek temporary relief until the parking space is available on the school grounds. Rowland said the board regretted the situation and would take every step possible to relieve the situation.

Letters were received from Mrs. Helen Shann, James F. Loughran, Dr. Mortimer Downer and Mrs. Joseph Leahy.

Amalgamated Award

A communication was received from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America offering again a $25 prize award to the student in the needle trade course who excells during the current school year. The award was accepted by the board with thanks.

Germans Warned Kremlin Can Start Troops in 24 Hours

Bonn, Germany, Feb. 8 (AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer warned the West German people today that a vast Russian military machine is pressed against the Elbe and can march against West Europe "within 24 hours" if the Kremlin gives the signal.

Interrupting debate on this proposal to raise 12 German divisions for the European army, Adenauer said the first shock of a Russian attack would have to be borne by American, British and French forces in West Germany but the Germans could not expect the allied troops to do everything for them.

German soldiers, he declared, are essential to counter-balance the Soviet power.

His warning came amid sharp criticism of his policy, particularly from the bitterly anti-rearmament Socialists. The chancellor was having trouble within his own fold as well. The second largest faction in his coalition government, the Free Democratic Party, said last night it would agree to arming West Germany only if the Bonn republic gets membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and if "all still imprisoned former German soldiers" are released.

The two-day preliminary debate on the army proposal was expected to conclude this afternoon.

Adenauer's plans to call up 300,000 to 400,000 German soldiers for the projected six-nation European army.

Netherlands Baron Says Her Majesty Proud to Visit Colony Founded Under Dutch Charter

Bond Is Strong

Diners at C of C Event Told Holland, U. S. Always Friends

Queen Juliana of The Netherlands will visit Kingston early in April in tribute to the city's 300th anniversary.

This news, announced officially last night by Baron J. A. de Vos van Steenwijk, Dutch Consul General to the United States, is as momentous today as it might have been to the first Dutch settlers here three centuries ago.

As guest speaker at the annual banquet of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce in the Governor Clinton Hotel, the Baron stressed the strong bonds of friendship between the United States and Holland and said his nation still looks westward for a "common future."

Holland prefers a strong bond among North Atlantic nations above forced attempts to unite Europe, he said, and his "note of warning" advised there be no hasty "match-making" abroad even though a federation of European nations is a desirable goal.

Welcome From Newkirk

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk welcomed the honored guest, Lawrence J. MacAvery, president of the Chamber of Commerce told of better days ahead for Kingston, and Harry Rigby, Jr., chairman of the dinner committee, was toastmaster. Invocation was by the Rev. J. Dean Dykstra, pastor of the Fair Street Reformed Church.

Joan Ortman, of Hurley, and Hilda Sauer of Kyserike, outstanding 4-H Club girl champions, were special guests, and seated with the other guests on the dais was Edy K. Altes, Dutch vice-consul in New York, who came here with the baron.

"I am extremely honored to announce that our queen will gladly accept your invitation," the baron said. Her majesty is looking forward with great interest to meeting the people of this city who are so closely related to her people."

Reads Invitation

Before his announcement that the queen would accept the invitation, the baron referred to the "prosperous city of Kingston," which had its start "under a charter from Holland," and he praised the invitation of Mayor Newkirk which said:

"The citizens of this city recognize as their primary duty that which it owes to the United States of America, but they still look upon Holland and its ruler as one would a godmother."

The queen will visit Kingston on April 5, the day on which she is also due to visit Hyde Park, the baron said. She is scheduled to arrive in Washington, D. C., April 3, and will leave Hyde Park for New York on April 6.

Always Friendly

The acceptance of the queen of the invitation to visit this city, the baron said, is one more proof that "the United States which leads the way, will always find Holland at its side."

In his talk on international affairs the baron stressed that the common bonds of interest between his nation and the United States, and other north Atlantic nations have proved that the relationship of these nations "cannot be undone," but the ancient differences among the nations of Europe, he felt, preclude the making of a quick union there.

Can't Be Too Hasty

Experience has shown, he said, that often those who are anxious to bring about marriages, fail because they are too hasty as match-makers. They should have patience and tact and this must be true in Europe.

"The time is ripe for integration of the nations of Europe, but no pressure is needed at present," he warned. The relationship between North Atlantic nations is closer, he said, but "the situation in Europe differs fundamentally" from this and from the union of states formed in America.

Nations of Europe, are many centuries old and have different

Will Check Law Relating to Stock Car Races; Discuss Buying Equipment

At a meeting of the town board of the town of Ulster held last evening Supervisor Percy Bush was authoribed to appoint an Industrial Committee to meet with the Kingston Chamber of Commerce and the Kingston city officials and see what can be done toward furtherance of industrial locations in this area.

Of late numerous concerns have inquired as to possible large tracts of land for industrial purposes. These concerns are interested in areas in or near the city which have railroad facilities and also suitable public utilities available.

Supervisor Bush named on the committee to work with him, Councilmen John Acker, Donald Parish and Justices Harold Macholdt and Clarence Rappleyea, Town Attorney Lloyd R. LeFever, Pratt Boice and Weidner H. Davis.

To Study Code

The board also authorized Supervisor Bush to name a committee to study the State Building Code and ascertain if the town building code was in accord with the state code or to recommend suitable changes if necessary. On

Trunk Murderess Back in Hospital

Winnie Ruth Judd Admits Help in Fifth Escape; Face Battered

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 8 (AP) — Trunk murderess Winnie Ruth Judd, scratched and battered looking, returned voluntarily to the state mental hospital under mysterious circumstances last night.

She surrendered at the home of the hospital superintendent with the brief comment:

"Well, I'm back."

It was the fifth escape for the fading "Tiger Woman" who 21 years ago killed two girl friends and shipped their dismembered bodies to Los Angeles.

Dr. M. W. Conway, the hospital superintendent, said she acknowledged she had received outside help in fleeing last Saturday night.

He also said Mrs. Judd appeared to have had "a face lifting." He did not elaborate on her appearance.

Dr. Dean Archer, clinical director, said later Mrs. Judd was "scratched and battered looking." He said her eyebrows had been plucked and her already dyed hair had been newly tinted.

Wanted to See Jury

All day there had been reports that she would give herself up if she could talk to the county grand jury.

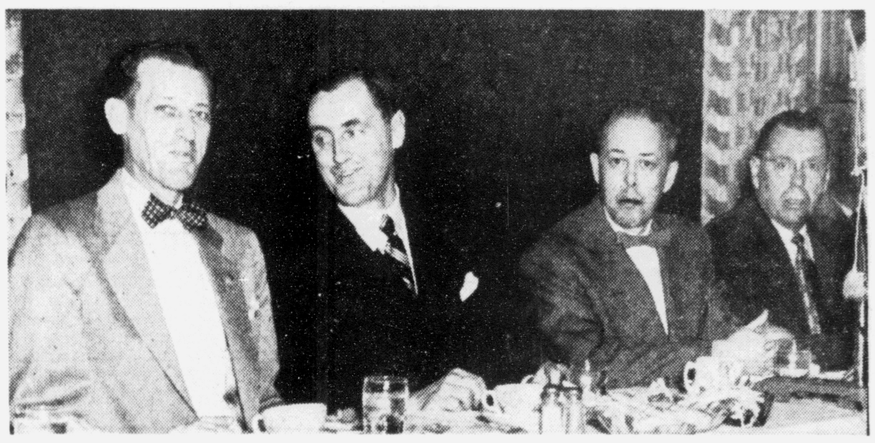

It was learned that two unidentified men and two equally unidentified state hospital employes had conferred about the hour she would surrender.

The fading "Tiger Woman" apparently was driven by automobile about midnight to the home of the asylum superintendent just outside the grounds of the big asylum.

The car which Dr. Conway said he was sure brought her back had disappeared without anyone getting a look at it.

Winnie Ruth, now 48, escaped the gallows by 72 hours in 1933 when she was adjudged insane after being convicted of first degree murder.

Lack of Animals Is Handicap to Work On Cancer Plans

Two Speakers Ask Support of Bill to Impound Stray Dogs for Medical Use

From World War 2 to the present the United States has had an unprecedented degree of medical research, but the major efforts in fields of military and civilian research "are slowing to a stop because experimental animals are not available," Dr. C. P. Rhoads, director of Memorial Cancer Center in New York, said in a talk here Thursday noon.

Addressing members of the Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions clubs and the Ulster County Medical Society, Dr. Rhoads and Dr. Frederick S. Philips of the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research asked support for the Hatch-Metcalf bill in the state Legislature. The bill would set up a strictly regulated policy to available for medical research.

Many Were Gassed

"In New York city alone," Dr. Rhoads said, "in a single year 69,000 dogs and 150,000 cats, unwanted and abandoned, were gassed, while medical and atomic research projects went begging."

He pointed out that animals as well as humans benefit from the experimental use of the animals. Better ways of treating dogs and cats were devised through the same research that leads to better methods of treating humans, he said.

Dr. Rhoads and Dr. Philips emphasized that the research centers do not want to use pets, or registered animals. The proposed bill, in fact, would protect the pets by making available to research the animals that would be disposed of in city pounds. At present, Dr. Philips said, research centers must buy animals from out-of-state dealers, some of whom use questionable methods in rounding up animals for sale.

Stresses Research

In answer to a question by Senator Arthur H. Wicks, Dr. Rhoads pointed out that present laws require all institutions which use experimental animals to be licensed and inspected. Any experiments causing pain must be done with the animal under anasthetics, the same as would be used for humans.

The importance of medical research was stressed by Dr. Rhoads, who pointed out today that we are faced by a potential enemy that is developing improved explosives, improved poison gas, biological warfare methods, and atomic energy.

"To know how good our protective measures are, we must use experimental animals," he said.

About 200 members of the three service clubs and the medical society attended the meeting, which was held at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

School Parking, Other Matters on Board Slate

Fowler's Motion To Sell School Is Backed by Board

Taxpayers Group Attending Session Asks Action to Relieve Money Burden on Them

The Kingston Board of Education took the first step Thursday evening toward sale of the No. 1 school building which is no longer being used for school purposes since the opening of the Washington school.

Trustee Fowler moved that the corporation counsel be empowered to draw up necessary legal documents complying with the Education Law and that the property be advertised for sale at public auction or otherwise disposed of under the provisions of the law. The motion was approved.

At the meeting of the board Thursday evening a delegation of three women was in attendance and Mrs. Adele Bregman spoke as their representative.

Talks as Taxpayer

Mrs. Bregman advocated disposal of the school buildings not being used for school purposes and the application of funds derived from the sale toward the reduction of the taxpayers' burden for school purposes. She said the property owners should be considered. School taxes were high and she asked that some relief be given. She said sale of unused school buildings would bring in a sum which should be used toward reduction of school costs.

The proposal to proceed with the sale of the No. 1 building on Wilbur avenue had been adopted prior to her speaking and she endorsed the plan, saying it should be sold for the "high dollar" at a public sale and the proceeds applied to the school budget.

No. 1 was closed last fall and the pupils transferred to No. 8 until that school was closed recently and the student body transferred to the Washington School.

Area Residents Declare Autos Block Property, Form Hazard for Children

Parking in the vicinity of the new Washington School will be studied by the Board of Education and Superintendent of Schools Arthur J. Laidlaw with the idea of relieving present confusion. Pending the completion of parking facilities for the teaching staff on the school grounds as soon as construction is completed, cars of the staff as well as workmen engaged on the job will have to be accommodated off the premises.

This off premises parking has created congestion in the immediate area of the school and property owners submitted a complaint to the board Thursday evening.

Four residents of the area wrote on their own behalf and for others in the area, complaining that cars stand parked along their property from 8 until 4:30 every day and prevent them from using parking facilities in front of their own property. One, who conducts a beauty parlor in the area, stated clients have complained of inability to find place to park when they visited the beauty parlor. The all day parking also created a traffic hazard and a dangerous situation involving children attending the school.

Plan for Spring

President Clarence Rowland stated that the board had a plan to on-premises parking of staff cars but this parking area could not be completed until spring. Meanwhile he said the workmen at the school as well as the teachers were parking on the street.

The matter was referred to the superintendent to study and seek temporary relief until the parking space is available on the school grounds. Rowland said the board regretted the situation and would take every step possible to relieve the situation.

Letters were received from Mrs. Helen Shann, James F. Loughran, Dr. Mortimer Downer and Mrs. Joseph Leahy.

Amalgamated Award

A communication was received from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America offering again a $25 prize award to the student in the needle trade course who excells during the current school year. The award was accepted by the board with thanks.

Germans Warned Kremlin Can Start Troops in 24 Hours

Bonn, Germany, Feb. 8 (AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer warned the West German people today that a vast Russian military machine is pressed against the Elbe and can march against West Europe "within 24 hours" if the Kremlin gives the signal.

Interrupting debate on this proposal to raise 12 German divisions for the European army, Adenauer said the first shock of a Russian attack would have to be borne by American, British and French forces in West Germany but the Germans could not expect the allied troops to do everything for them.

German soldiers, he declared, are essential to counter-balance the Soviet power.

His warning came amid sharp criticism of his policy, particularly from the bitterly anti-rearmament Socialists. The chancellor was having trouble within his own fold as well. The second largest faction in his coalition government, the Free Democratic Party, said last night it would agree to arming West Germany only if the Bonn republic gets membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and if "all still imprisoned former German soldiers" are released.

The two-day preliminary debate on the army proposal was expected to conclude this afternoon.

Adenauer's plans to call up 300,000 to 400,000 German soldiers for the projected six-nation European army.

Diners at C of C Event Told Holland, U. S. Always Friends

Queen Juliana of The Netherlands will visit Kingston early in April in tribute to the city's 300th anniversary.

This news, announced officially last night by Baron J. A. de Vos van Steenwijk, Dutch Consul General to the United States, is as momentous today as it might have been to the first Dutch settlers here three centuries ago.

As guest speaker at the annual banquet of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce in the Governor Clinton Hotel, the Baron stressed the strong bonds of friendship between the United States and Holland and said his nation still looks westward for a "common future."

Holland prefers a strong bond among North Atlantic nations above forced attempts to unite Europe, he said, and his "note of warning" advised there be no hasty "match-making" abroad even though a federation of European nations is a desirable goal.

Welcome From Newkirk

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk welcomed the honored guest, Lawrence J. MacAvery, president of the Chamber of Commerce told of better days ahead for Kingston, and Harry Rigby, Jr., chairman of the dinner committee, was toastmaster. Invocation was by the Rev. J. Dean Dykstra, pastor of the Fair Street Reformed Church.

Joan Ortman, of Hurley, and Hilda Sauer of Kyserike, outstanding 4-H Club girl champions, were special guests, and seated with the other guests on the dais was Edy K. Altes, Dutch viceconsul in New York, who came here with the baron.

"I am extremely honored to announce that our queen will gladly accept your invitation," the baron said. Her majesty is looking forward with great interest to meeting the people of this city who are so closely related to her people."

Reads Invitation

Before his announcement that the queen would accept the invitation, the baron referred to the "prosperous city of Kingston," which had its start "under a charter from Holland," and he praised the invitation of Mayor Newkirk which said:

"The citizens of this city recognize as their primary duty that which it owes to the United States of America, but they still look upon Holland and its ruler as one would a godmother."

The queen will visit Kingston on April 5, the day on which she is also due to visit Hyde Park, the baron said. She is scheduled to arrive in Washington, D. C., April 3, and will leave Hyde Park for New York on April 6.

Always Friendly

The acceptance of the queen of the invitation to visit this city, the baron said, is one more proof that "the United States which leads the way, will always find Holland at its side."

In his talk on international affairs the baron stressed that the common bonds of interest between his nation and the United States, and other north Atlantic nations have proved that the relationship of these nations "cannot be undone," but the ancient differences among the nations of Europe, he felt, preclude the making of a quick union there.

Can't Be Too Hasty

Experience has shown, he said, that often those who are anxious to bring about marriages, fail because they are too hasty as match-makers. They should have patience and tact and this must be true in Europe.

"The time is ripe for integration of the nations of Europe, but no pressure is needed at present," he warned. The relationship between North Atlantic nations is closer, he said, but "the situation in Europe differs fundamentally" from this and from the union of states formed in America.

Nations of Europe, are many centuries old and have different

Churchill There

The 20-minute accession proceedings took place in the scarlet-curtained entire room of St. James's Palace.

There were 192 councillors present. They remained standing all through the ceremony.

Prime Minister Churchill was there, and standing by was the new queen's 30-year-old husband, the Duke of Edinburgh. King George had made him a member of the Privy Council last Dec. 4, so he was automatically a member of the Accession Council. At his side was the Duke of Gloucester, King George's younger brother.

Elizabeth entered the palace by the garden entrance and first went to the white and gold throne room. She wore mourning.

After making her accession declaration she took an oath to safeguard the security of the Church of Scotland.

As the anthem ended the ceremonies at St. James' Palace, a 41-gun salute from the Royal Household Artillery boomed out in Hyde Park a mile away. All over Britain flags which had fluttered at half staff since the death of King George were hauled to the top of their standards. There they will fly for six hours in celebration and honor of the new queen before dipping again to half staff in mourning until the king is buried next Friday.

Would Bar Germany

Paris, Feb. 8 (AP)—French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman reportedly told French legislators today the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would cease to be a defensive alliance if West Germany entered it. Schuman addressed a joint meeting of the National Assembly's Committees on Defense and Foreign Affairs. He went on to say that the entrance of the Bonn regime would change the treaty's defensive character, because of Germany's claims on territory Poland acquired after World War 2.

Bonnies Quit Grid

Olean, N. Y., Feb. 8 (AP)—St. Bonaventure University announced today it was suspending intercollegiate football, at least for 1952. The Very Rev. Juvenal Lalor, OFM, president of the university, said "ever increasing costs in every department and steadily declining income" prompted the action.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Motors took their turn today as leaders in a higher stock market.

They had plenty of help from the rest of the list, especially in the oils, rails, steels, and rubbers.

Gains usually went into the 1 to 2 point range with a few shooting beyond that mark.

The volume of business developed today was a little better than yesterday, but there was nothing especially remarkable about it.

Favor shown the automobile division comes from a number of sources. The motors have been sluggish recently, and now are simply taking their turn. They are peace stocks. There are high hopes among the bulls that Chrysler will maintain its dividend rate as did General Motors.

Killed Sweetheart

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—The young man spoke in Portuguese, and police had a hard time understanding him. But they finally got the idea. They said he told them he had just killed his sweetheart. Police said that Hiram Diaz, 22-year-old delivery boy, today led them to the Brooklyn apartment of Miss Carmine Montalbo, 19. She had been stabbed fatally in the back and neck. Her mother, Mrs. Felecia Montalbo, was there, crying hysterically. Diaz, booked on homicide charges, admitted he had stabbed Miss Montalbo in the heat of a lovers' quarrel, police said.

Less Copies Needed

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—The Senate Investigations Committee says it has stopped the Commerce Department from requiring businessmen to furnish 75 copies of applications for authority to make overseas shipments. Chairman Hoey (D.-S.C.) said "75 copies were from two to three times as many copies as were actually required for the processing of these applications. Hoey said in a statement yesterday that under the regulations of the Office of International Trade in the Commerce Department, business firms should have to supply only two copies of such applications.

Advocates Music For All During Talk Before P-TA

Woodstock, Feb. 8—Music study for everyone was advocated by Hanus A. Schimmerling, composer, musician and teacher, in a discussion on the value of music education, before the Woodstock Parent-Teacher Association on Thursday night at the school.

Schimmerling warned against parents giving music lessons to their children with the objective of having them merely play or sing. "It must," he said, "penetrate much deeper than that, and whether the pupil intends to be an amateur or a professional, it is a thorough building up process." He made the distinction between the amateur and the professional musician as one who studied music because he loved it as distinguished from one who intended to make it his career, and not as the popular conception has it, between the mediocre and the first-rate artist. Both, he declared, should undergo a thorough music education.

Just as it is necessary to read, write and speak a foreign language if you want to live in a foreign country, it is necessary to learn the language of music. The student must learn to analyze music, understand the principles of rythm, tonality and know what the various instruments can do.

To fully enjoy the study of music, he believes, it is not necessary to be gifted. With the various aspects of music to choose from, the student may learn to play an instrument according to his talent, or sing, or he may concentrate upon the study of the orchestra or the composers, whichever gives him the fullest enjoyment. He further stressed it as a valuable social art, music being a universal language. Wherever there is music there is usually a cozy atmosphere of pleasant congenial surroundings. "Wherever there is a piano nearby," he said, "it is quite easy to make friends."

Let Teacher Decide

As to teaching music, Schimmerling said that the "only method is to change the method in every individual case." He recommended that the prospective pupil be thoroughly examined, not only as to his musical aptitudes but in regard to his background, habits and character. Once study has begun, the students reactions should be observed, as it may be necessary to change the original subject. "A pupil has to be treated like a patient." Schimmerling advised that the parents not decide that their child should be a concert singer or a pianist. The decision should be made by the teacher.

"The degree of musicianship," he stated, "may be ascertained by analyzing the pupil's talent for rhythm and pitch," which he divided into harmonic and melodic abilities. He went on to explain the three learning types: the optic, or visual type which he likened unto a camera; the acoustic, or the type which learns by ear; and the motoric, or the musician who learns through his fingers—his fingers simply run in the proper direction.

Schimmerling enlarged upon the various fields in music which offered a choice of careers. The pianist might either become a soloist, an accompanist, or a coach, who must learn how to reproduce the opera scores—both arias and choruses within the confines of the keyboard. The conductor usually has a good knowledge of the piano. A singer must have either a great voice—which are very few—or to make up for it must be an excellent sight reader.

Cites Opportunities

Schimmerling touched upon the opportunities to be found in the commercial music field, among them the positions of the music copiest for a publisher, the proof reader, the arranger, the music editor, the musicologist, music critic and librarian. Whereas the soloist may often have to defray his own expenses, the instrumentalists who select an orchestral career are frequently much better off.

Urging that parents exercise patience before giving into a child who wants to discontinue his music studies, Schimmerling recounted the story of the young musician who had a gift for the piano, but unaccountably wished to cease his lessons. His mother, a musician herself, won her point that her son continue, over the indifference of her husband who was a doctor and was not impressed with the importance of music study. The boy, after six months, resumed his music studies and eventually became a professional musician—it was Schimmerling himself. The feeling of "listlessness, mere laziness, or that he is doing too much homework, will probably pass. And it is the duty of every teacher to make the best out of the least."

He emphasized the importance of the cooperation of parents in encouraging music study. "You will find, with careful analysis of the family budget, that you can afford more than you think."

"Ninety per cent of all wars," he concluded, "were fought between nations who spoke different languages. Let's learn more languages, but let's study, too, the language which is understood by everyone—the language of music."

Mrs. Joseph Marr presided at the business meeting which preceded the program. She made an appeal for volunteers to assist at the kindergarten during the lunch hour, and for "transporters" who would be available in a car pool to provide emergency transportation home for a sick child, or for any other emergency arising at the school. Mrs. Charles Kullman will accept names of those wishing to join the pool.

With the safety committee now accomplishing many of its objectives, Mrs. Marr appointed Mrs. Harmon Fischer to head the health committee and introduced Miss Anne Cassidy, school and county health nurse, who spoke briefly on the dental program for both school and preschool children. She said that the program was first introduced to teach the importance of dental care, but has now been extended to include the fluorine applications now being given to both school and pre-school children. Notices will be sent to parents of children within the proper age groups for the treatments, for their approval to have the children given the fluorine applications by Mrs. Mary Chatfield, dental hygienist.

Appreciation was expressed by Mrs. Harold Mellin for the work done by Mrs. John Pike in cleaning, repairing and rebinding a large number of the kindergarten books. As an expression of gratitude the kindergarten children sent a collection of cards they had made to Mrs. Pike.

A highlight of the meeting was the group of songs which were presented by 35 members of the school glee club under the direction of Mrs. Edna Quick, accompanied by Mrs. Leo Herbert.

Held for Double Slaying

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—A bachelor who says frustrated love made his mind "go blank" was to be arraigned today on charges he slashed two women to death in a Bronx apartment. John Kerringer, 33, arrested yesterday in the double slaying, was quoted by police as saying he lost control of himself when he decided his romance with Mrs. Genevieve Mitchell, 36, "was breaking up." Mrs. Mitchell, estranged from her husband, and Mrs. Francesca Castello, 45, a widow, were fatally stabbed in Mrs. Mitchell's Bronx apartment.

Arnall Headed for Job

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—Ellis Gibbs Arnall, Georgia's plump little ex-governor, today was headed for a big new job as the nation's price boss—a job he labelled "tough, unpopular and thankless." But someone has got to do it, Arnall said. President Truman sent to the Senate yesterday the nomination of the 44-year-old southerner to be director of the Office of Price Stabilization. Several senators predicted little or no opposition to Arnall's confirmation for the $16,000 a year post. Arnall would succeed Michael V. DiSalle who is quitting Feb. 15 to seek the Democratic nomination for the U. S. Senate in Ohio.

To Held Shoppers

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—Rules for labeling furs by the down-to-earth names of the animals they came from have been issued by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC). They require for example, that rabbit be called just that, not coney or anything else. The real-name rules were issued under the Fur Products Labeling Act, which will become effective Aug. 9. Congress passed the law on the theory there was too much confusion in the labeling of furs and that a customer should know exactly what he—or she—was buying.

Scout Election Plans

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—The Boy Scouts of America plan a mammoth drive to get every qualified citizen registered—and to the polls—in 1952. The plan was discussed at a breakfast today attended by such Washington bigwigs as Supreme Court Justice Clark, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, Secretary of the Treasurer and a score of congressmen. Dr. Arthur A. Schuck, chief scout executive, said the scouts plan to distribute 1,000,000 posters, urging citizens to register.

Speculate on Coronation

London, Feb. 8 (AP)—Queen Elizabeth probably will be crowned some time between next August and the spring of 1953, Londoners were guessing today. There just isn't an official hint yet about the exact date. There is only one fixed rule—it cannot take place until court mourning for the dead monarch is over.

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 8 (AP)—American Shooting Star jets today balsted Haejo, a rail and highway junction in western Korea, with bombs and Napalm. Pilots reported more than 300 supply buildings were destroyed or damaged, Fifth Air Force said.

Churchill There

The 20-minute accession proceedings took place in the scarlet-curtained entire room of St. James's Palace.

There were 192 councillors present. They remained standing all through the ceremony.

Prime Minister Churchill was there, and standing by was the new queen's 30-year-old husband, the Duke of Edinburgh. King George had made him a member of the Privy Council last Dec. 4, so he was automatically a member of the Accession Council. At his side was the Duke of Gloucester, King George's younger brother.

Elizabeth entered the palace by the garden entrance and first went to the white and gold throne room. She wore mourning.

After making her accession declaration she took an oath to safeguard the security of the Church of Scotland.

As the anthem ended the ceremonies at St. James' Palace, a 41-gun salute from the Royal Household Artillery boomed out in Hyde Park a mile away. All over Britain flags which had fluttered at half staff since the death of King George were hauled to the top of their standards. There they will fly for six hours in celebration and honor of the new queen before dipping again to half staff in mourning until the king is buried next Friday.

Would Bar Germany

He went on to say that the entrance of the Bonn regime would change the treaty's defensive character, because of Germany's claims on territory Poland acquired after World War 2.

Killed Sweetheart

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—The young man spoke in Portuguese, and police had a hard time understanding him. But they finally got the idea. They said he told them he had just killed his sweetheart. Police said that Hiram Diaz, 22-year-old delivery boy, today led them to the Brooklyn apartment of Miss Carmine Montalbo, 19. She had been stabbed fatally in the back and neck. Her mother, Mrs. Felecia Montalbo, was there, crying hysterically. Diaz, booked on homicide charges, admitted he had stabbed Miss Montalbo in the heat of a lovers' quarrel, police said.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Motors took their turn today as leaders in a higher stock market.

They had plenty of help from the rest of the list, especially in the oils, rails, steels, and rubbers.

Gains usually went into the 1 to 2 point range with a few shooting beyond that mark.

The volume of business developed today was a little better than yesterday, but there was nothing especially remarkable about it.

Favor shown the automobile division comes from a number of sources. The motors have been sluggish recently, and now are simply taking their turn. They are peace stocks. There are high hopes among the bulls that Chrysler will maintain its dividend rate as did General Motors.

Less Copies Needed

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—The Senate Investigations Committee says it has stopped the Commerce Department from requiring businessmen to furnish 75 copies of applications for authority to make overseas shipments. Chairman Hoey (D.-S.C.) said "75 copies were from two to three times as many copies as were actually required for the processing of these applications. Hoey said in a statement yesterday that under the regulations of the Office of International Trade in the Commerce Department, business firms should have to supply only two copies of such applications.

Advocates Music For All During Talk Before P-TA

Woodstock, Feb. 8—Music study for everyone was advocated by Hanus A. Schimmerling, composer, musician and teacher, in a discussion on the value of music education, before the Woodstock Parent-Teacher Association on Thursday night at the school.

Schimmerling warned against parents giving music lessons to their children with the objective of having them merely play or sing. "It must," he said, "penetrate much deeper than that, and whether the pupil intends to be an amateur or a professional, it is a thorough building up process." He made the distinction between the amateur and the professional musician as one who studied music because he loved it as distinguished from one who intended to make it his career, and not as the popular conception has it, between the mediocre and the first-rate artist. Both, he declared, should undergo a thorough music education.

Just as it is necessary to read, write and speak a foreign language if you want to live in a foreign country, it is necessary to learn the language of music. The student must learn to analyze music, understand the principles of rythm, tonality and know what the various instruments can do.

To fully enjoy the study of music, he believes, it is not necessary to be gifted. With the various aspects of music to choose from, the student may learn to play an instrument according to his talent, or sing, or he may concentrate upon the study of the orchestra or the composers, whichever gives him the fullest enjoyment. He further stressed it as a valuable social art, music being a universal language. Wherever there is music there is usually a cozy atmosphere of pleasant congenial surroundings. "Wherever there is a piano nearby," he said, "it is quite easy to make friends."

Let Teacher Decide

As to teaching music, Schimmerling said that the "only method is to change the method in every individual case." He recommended that the prospective pupil be thoroughly examined, not only as to his musical aptitudes but in regard to his background, habits and character. Once study has begun, the students reactions should be observed, as it may be necessary to change the original subject. "A pupil has to be treated like a patient." Schimmerling advised that the parents not decide that their child should be a concert singer or a pianist. The decision should be made by the teacher.

"The degree of musicianship," he stated, "may be ascertained by analyzing the pupil's talent for rhythm and pitch," which he divided into harmonic and melodic abilities. He went on to explain the three learning types: the optic, or visual type which he likened unto a camera; the acoustic, or the type which learns by ear; and the motoric, or the musician who learns through his fingers—his fingers simply run in the proper direction.

Schimmerling enlarged upon the various fields in music which offered a choice of careers. The pianist might either become a soloist, an accompanist, or a coach, who must learn how to reproduce the opera scores—both arias and choruses within the confines of the keyboard. The conductor usually has a good knowledge of the piano. A singer must have either a great voice—which are very few—or to make up for it must be an excellent sight reader.

Cites Opportunities

Schimmerling touched upon the opportunities to be found in the commercial music field, among them the positions of the music copiest for a publisher, the proof reader, the arranger, the music editor, the musicologist, music critic and librarian. Whereas the soloist may often have to defray his own expenses, the instrumentalists who select an orchestral career are frequently much better off.

Urging that parents exercise patience before giving into a child who wants to discontinue his music studies, Schimmerling recounted the story of the young musician who had a gift for the piano, but unaccountably wished to cease his lessons. His mother, a musician herself, won her point that her son continue, over the indifference of her husband who was a doctor and was not impressed with the importance of music study. The boy, after six months, resumed his music studies and eventually became a professional musician—it was Schimmerling himself. The feeling of "listlessness, mere laziness, or that he is doing too much homework, will probably pass. And it is the duty of every teacher to make the best out of the least."

He emphasized the importance of the cooperation of parents in encouraging music study. "You will find, with careful analysis of the family budget, that you can afford more than you think."

"Ninety per cent of all wars," he concluded, "were fought between nations who spoke different languages. Let's learn more languages, but let's study, too, the language which is understood by everyone—the language of music."

Mrs. Joseph Marr presided at the business meeting which preceded the program. She made an appeal for volunteers to assist at the kindergarten during the lunch hour, and for "transporters" who would be available in a car pool to provide emergency transportation home for a sick child, or for any other emergency arising at the school. Mrs. Charles Kullman will accept names of those wishing to join the pool.

With the safety committee now accomplishing many of its objectives, Mrs. Marr appointed Mrs. Harmon Fischer to head the health committee and introduced Miss Anne Cassidy, school and county health nurse, who spoke briefly on the dental program for both school and pre-school children. She said that the program was first introduced to teach the importance of dental care, but has now been extended to include the fluorine applications now being given to both school and pre-school children. Notices will be sent to parents of children within the proper age groups for the treatments, for their approval to have the children given the fluorine applications by Mrs. Mary Chatfield, dental hygienist.

Appreciation was expressed by Mrs. Harold Mellin for the work done by Mrs. John Pike in cleaning, repairing and rebinding a large number of the kindergarten books. As an expression of gratitude the kindergarten children sent a collection of cards they had made to Mrs. Pike.

A highlight of the meeting was the group of songs which were presented by 35 members of the school glee club under the direction of Mrs. Edna Quick, accompanied by Mrs. Leo Herbert.

Held for Double Slaying

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—A bachelor who says frustrated love made his mind "go blank" was to be arraigned today on charges he slashed two women to death in a Bronx apartment. John Kerringer, 33, arrested yesterday in the double slaying, was quoted by police as saying he lost control of himself when he decided his romance with Mrs. Genevieve Mitchell, 36, "was breaking up." Mrs. Mitchell, estranged from her husband, and Mrs. Francesca Castello, 45, a widow, were fatally stabbed in Mrs. Mitchell's Bronx apartment.

New Price Boss

Arnall Headed for Job

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—Ellis Gibbs Arnall, Georgia's plump little ex-governor, today was headed for a big new job as the nation's price boss—a job he labelled "tough, unpopular and thankless." But someone has got to do it, Arnall said. President Truman sent to the Senate yesterday the nomination of the 44-year-old southerner to be director of the Office of Price Stabilization. Several senators predicted little or no opposition to Arnall's confirmation for the $16,000 a year post. Arnall would succeed Michael V. DiSalle who is quitting Feb. 15 to seek the Democratic nomination for the U. S. Senate in Ohio.

To Held Shoppers

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—Rules for labeling furs by the down-to-earth names of the animals they came from have been issued by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC). They require for example, that rabbit be called just that, not coney or anything else. The real-name rules were issued under the Fur Products Labeling Act, which will become effective Aug. 9. Congress passed the law on the theory there was too much confusion in the labeling of furs and that a customer should know exactly what he—or she—was buying.

Scout Election Plans

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—The Boy Scouts of America plan a mammoth drive to get every qualified citizen registered—and to the polls—in 1952. The plan was discussed at a breakfast today attended by such Washington bigwigs as Supreme Court Justice Clark, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, Secretary of the Treasurer and a score of congressmen. Dr. Arthur A. Schuck, chief scout executive, said the scouts plan to distribute 1,000,000 posters, urging citizens to register.

Speculate on Coronation

London, Feb. 8 (AP)—Queen Elizabeth probably will be crowned some time between next August and the spring of 1953, Londoners were guessing today. There just isn't an official hint yet about the exact date. There is only one fixed rule—it cannot take place until court mourning for the dead monarch is over.

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 8 (AP)—American Shooting Star jets today balsted Haejo, a rail and highway junction in western Korea, with bombs and Napalm. Pilots reported more than 300 supply buildings were destroyed or damaged, Fifth Air Force said.

Four persons were injured in two city traffic mishaps yesterday.

Adee Boyce, 62, of 608 Broadway, suffered lacerations of the face, multiple contusions, a fracture of the right shoulder and the right thigh bone at the knee when he was struck by a truck at Broadway and Field Court.

The report at 5:08 p. m., by Officers Francis Fagan and Louis Sapp, Jr., said that a truck owned by P. Ballantine & Son, Field Court, and operated by Victor Joseph Komosa, 47, of 47 Murray street, was headed south on Broadway and entering Field Court at the time of the mishap.

Boyce was knocked to the pavement, but was able to get up and was taken to Kingston Hospital in a police patrol car, the report said.

A report at 9:54 p. m., said the three others were injured when a car driven by Eleanor C. Saehloff, of 53 Second avenue, headed east on Hoffman street, ran into the rear of the car of Joseph F. Smith, 48 Hoffman street, while it was parked at that address.

The injured, all of 53 Second avenue, were: Eleanor Saehloff, a bruised nose; Judith Ann Saehloff, 5, a cut lower lip and Rose Lindhurst, 65, bruised knees.

Officers Charles Hoehing and James Harbeck investigated.

Most States Have Only 'Paper Plans'

Newburgh, N. Y., Feb. 8 (AP)—Civil Defense representatives from 18 states were told yesterday that most states have not gone beyond "paper plans" for keeping private planes out of the air in event of attack.

The statement was made by James R. Ducrest, liaison officer of the Civil Aeronautics Administration (CAA) for the eastern air defense force, at a meeting at Stewart Air Force Base.

The meeting was held to discuss technical problems of common interest to air force and federal and state civilian defense officials.

Ducrest urged that the states take "prompt and positive action" on the problem of keeping private planes from interfering with air defense actions in case of enemy air attack.

Against Opening Rolls

Albany, Feb. 8 (AP)—Opening relief rolls to public inspection would "humiliate the vast majority of public assistance recipients," leaders of the New York Public Welfare Association say. The association's executive committee condemned the proposal yesterday at the opening of the group's two-day winter meeting. About 200 welfare workers are attending. Legislation to let localities open the lists for public inspection now is before a State Senate committee. The bill, introduced by Senator Henry A. Wise, Watertown Republican, is given little chance of passage.

Son of Lomontville Couple Is Awarded Silver Star Medal

Captain Murray S. Pinckney, son of Dr. and Mrs. John H. MacDonald, Lomontville, was recently presented the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action in Korea during a ceremony at the Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, Pa.

Captain Pinckney, a member of the 82nd Field Artillery Batallion, 1st Cavalry Division, distinguished himself June 4, 1951, near Sangwonni, Korea.

His citation reads in part:

"Captain Pinckney, liaison officer, volunteered to fly through weather that was far below minimum operational standards to direct supporting artillery fire. After sighting a hostile column moving south, he directed accurate fire, forcing the enemy to withdraw.

"Although Captain Pinckney was hampered throughout the operation by a malfunction of the aircraft engine, which threatened to force the plane down behind enemy lines, he continued his self-assigned mission. A few minutes later he observed another group of approximately 400 enemy moving north and again flew at low altitude and directed fire on this unit, inflicting severe casualties."

The overseas veteran, who received his commission as a second lieutenant after graduating from the Officer Candidate School, Fort Sill, Okla., July 1, 1943, later attended pilot school at Pittsburg, Kans., and in 1947 was graduated from the Helicopter School, San Marcos, Tex.

He served overseas in Hawaii from 1935 to 1937; in Europe from 1944 to 1946 and in Japan and Korea from September 1949 to August 1951.

Captain Pinckney's wife, Anne J. and son, Michael F., live at 149-32 122nd street, Ozone Park, L. I.

Dental Health

(The following article has been submitted by the Third District Dental Society of New York in the interest of better dental health for children. It is a part of the nation-wide observance of Children's Dental Health Week.)

Dental caries is primarily a disease of childhood and adolescence. Most of the damage caused by decay occurs before the age of 25 years. However, periodontal disease causes the greatest loss of teeth during middle age.

Actually there are two basic types of periodontal disease: (1) diseases of the gingivae (gums) and (2) diseases of the alveolar bone (bone surrounding the tooth and attached to it). Healthy gums and healthy bone to support the teeth require proper local care and a good diet. Dietary deficiencies can and often do affect the health of the periodontal tissues. In vitamin C deficiency the gingiva becomes swollen and bleeds easily. If the deficiency is continued for a long time, the alveolar bone may be destroyed so that the teeth loosen and fall out. In niacin deficiency (pellagra) the gingiva becomes infected, raw and painful.

Although the enamel and dentin of the tooth require proper nutrition only while the tooth is growing and calcifying within the jaws, the tissues around the tooth require nourishment even after the tooth has erupted into the oral cavity. Because of the heavy stresses to which these tissues are subjected, the bone and the gingiva constantly need to be repaired. Unless this repair is made adequately every day, the bone and gingiva soon deteriorate like an uninhabited house which soon weathers and falls apart. Proper daily maintenance and care of the gingiva is, therefore, essential to the health of the teeth.

Care of the gums must be accomplished in two ways. The teeth must be kept clean and free of debris which might ferment and thus injure the gums, and the gums must receive adequate nutrition through the blood stream.

Care of the mouth, which is known as oral hygiene, is essential to a healthy mouth. A clean mouth is not only attractive but is biologically necessary to the health of all the soft tissues, especially the gingiva and tongue.

An unclean mouth inevitably suffers from the presence of large numbers of bacteria at the gum margins. If the bacteria are acid-producers (as they frequently are in the young), then decay will occur around the necks of the teeth. If the bacteria are proteolytic rather than acidogenic (as they frequently are during middle age), then inflammation of the gums and foul odor from the mouth may result.

Mrs. Knight Freed

Los Angeles, Feb. 8 (AP)—Oklahoma oil heiress Mattie Anderson Knight was freed yesterday from personal restraint in a sanitarium where she became a voluntary patient several months ago. The Superior Court granted Mrs. Knight's petition for a writ of habeas corpus. The action does not free Mrs. Knight, 46, from incompetency proceedings instituted by her daughter, Mrs. Lou Ann Zellers of Lake Success, N. Y., who claims her mother is not able to properly manage her personal and financial affairs because of addiction to narcotics and alcohol. Mrs. Zellers asks to be appointed guardian of her mother's person and that a bank manage Mrs. Knight's million dollar estate.

The action does not free Mrs. Knight, 46, from incompetency proceedings instituted by her daughter, Mrs. Lou Ann Zellers of Lake Success, N. Y., who claims her mother is not able to properly manage her personal and financial affairs because of addiction to narcotics and alcohol. Mrs. Zellers asks to be appointed guardian of her mother's person and that a bank manage Mrs. Knight's million dollar estate.

ELIZABETH REIGNS

"The King is dead; long live the Queen." With this traditional phrase, pronounced without pause, Britons accept the passing of one monarch and the ascension of another. Spoken all in one breath the simple sentence is an expression of the continuity of the Crown. The Crown is a symbol of the strong cord which ties present day Great Britain to its glorious past.

King George VI was well loved by his subjects. His reign was troubled and comparatively short. He came to the throne in 1936 with his country in the grip of the Great Depression. Europe seethed and in Germany a madman already plotted the war which was to see Englishmen, in the words of Winston Churchill, rise to "their finest hour." King George reigned with the majesty and dignity that Britons have come to expect of their monarchs.

Queen Elizabeth, already secure in the affection of the people who grew to love her as a princess, has been trained since the age of ten for the duty she was to fulfill. In Great Britain the monarchy is constitutional; Kings and Queens reign but do not rule. Yet the throne, held above the dissensions of politics, can be a strong influence on the Prime Minister and upon the Parliament. Queen Elizabeth is ready for this responsibility.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill stands ready to aid his new Queen at the beginning of her reign. His experience in governing dates to the reign of Queen Victoria. The throne will have his hard won experience and counsel besides the vigor and youthful outlook of the 25 year-old Elizabeth.

The world joins England in mourning the passing of King George, and hails the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The King is dead; long live the Queen.

STATE TAX INFORMATION RETURNS

Employer information returns for New York State's personal income tax are due February 15. The returns for 4,500,000 employes from 250,000 employers are due two weeks earlier than last year as a result of 1951 legislation. Last year information returns were due March 1.

Employer information returns are reports of compensation paid to employes during the preceding year. These reports are later matched against state income tax returns filed by individuals as a check on delinquency.

The reports are required from every employer covering all of his resident employes who received more than $1,100 in 1951, if single, or more than $2,750, if married.

It will be noted that the information report requirements cover employes who receive $1,100 or more, if single, and $2,750 or more, if married. However, state personal income tax returns must be filed by single persons with net income of $1,000 or more; married couples with net income of $2,500 or more. The reason for this difference is that on information returns, allowance is made for the flat 10 per cent deduction provision in the income tax law.

The driver who imbibes too freely may find himself listed in the papers as a man of extinction.

MEDALS FOR MARINERS

A bill has been introduced into the Senate which would authorize the Maritime Commission to award medals and decorations to merchant seamen who perform especially meritorious service. The Commission would have liked to make such an award recently to Captain Henrik Kurt Carlsen for his effort to save his ship, the Flying Enterprise. The Commission found that it was without power to do so. A bill authorizing a Korean war service ribbon for merchant sailors in the area has also been introduced.

The men who have sailed in the American Merchant Marine through the years have compiled an enviable record of courage and service. During the two world wars they braved the submarine menace, and many lost their lives or suffered shipwreck to deliver American supplies and troops to the battlefronts. Their service is worthy of special recognition and honor, in peace and in war.

THE BLACK LIST

Certain commentators, actors, directors and writers are finding it extremely difficult to get employment in the movies, radio and television. Employers find that their presence on any picture or program encounters excessive sales resistance and that therefore any product with which they are associated is defective from a business standpoint.

This is altogether true of two categories: those who have been exposed as Communist Party members at hearings of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and those who have taken advantage of the Fifth Amendment to refuse to answer questions. While the Fifth Amendment is one of our greatest rights, namely, that a person may not be required to incriminate himself, public opinion accepts such a plea as equivalent to admitting guilt.

Another group, curiously, that finds it difficult to get employment in the motion picture industry are those who since 1947 have been testifying before Congressional committees. The so-called statesmen of that industry apparently take the position that those who disclosed the Communists have embarrassed them and should be punished. Many of them are actually unemployed.

The Authors' League, which is a sort of writers' trade union, has addressed a letter to Wayne Coy, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, protesting the Black List. This document is signed by Rex Stout, as president, and announces a committee consisting of himself as chairman, Oscar Hammerstein 2nd, John Hersey and Elmer Rice, which, while it opposes blacklisting, takes no position on Communism.

The heart of the documents is:

"We know, of course, that your attention has been repeatedly called to the denial of employment by radio and television producers to individuals because of their alleged political affiliations or beliefs. We are aware that the FCC has no power to control the employment policies of sponsors of radio and television programs. But we are also aware that the FCC does have power to regulate licensees, whose conduct does not serve the public interest. The practice of blacklisting has spread to such an alarming extent that it has gone far beyond isolated acts of specific individuals and has assumed the proportions of what may properly be characterized as an industry policy, which involves not only sponsors and producers but networks and individual station licensees, and thus brings the matter clearly within the jurisdiction of the FCC."

Several questions have to be asked here:

1. Do these gentlemen want the FCC to refuse licenses to stations that reject Communists?

2. Does not that put a Communist in a privileged position, namely, that whereas a Republican or a Democrat may be refused employment, a Communist must be given employment if he says that he is a Communist?

3. Must a sponsor accept a Communist as a writer, director or actor even if the public clearly indicates that it will not use the product?

4. Has the FCC any right, under the legislation bringing it into existence, to intervene in such a matter at all?

One of the issues not raised in this letter is "Counterattack" and "Red Channels"—publications which compile data on the activities of Communists. A good share of their data comes from reports of Congressional and legislative committees and testimony in the courts.

The position generally taken by those who oppose blacklisting is that the movie, radio and television industry should ignore "Counterattack" and "Red Channels." Experience shows that the public will not ignore these publications or the data which they contain, however published. Simply stated, the exhibitors dare not disregard this issue.

This is a vexed problem which cannot be lightly treated. Freedom of thought and freedom of speech are among our greatest heritages. It would damage our country if a goose-step literature were all that is available to us. Men should be able to write and speak without fear, and certainly without the fear of unemployment.

On the other hand, Communists have been established in our courts and before Congressional committees as disciplined agents of a foreign government, now our enemy. To Rex Stout, I put this question:

Have you ever protected a Nazi or a Fascist in his rights of freedom of expression as you now seek, in this letter, to protect Communists?

It would seem that that alone is the test of sincerity.

That Body of Yours

CARE FOR THE FEET

I write often about the importance of the feet, how healthy feet, free from corns, bunions, hammertoes, fallen arches, mean that a man or woman setting out to put in a useful day can be assured of accomplishing this purpose.

I have written before about a United States President whose feet were such a torment that at times he was unable to be his own gentlemanly self and was uncivil and rude to those about him.

Fortunately, now that it is known that the feet are as important as the head in making a living, the profession of chiropody, sometimes called podometry, has come into its own. At Harvard and other universities a four-year course in chiropody is given, the graduates in which are performing a wonderful service to mankind.

The general physician, in most cases, is not equipped with the instruments, knowledge and technique to handles these cases of sore, painful feet and is quite willing to refer such patients to a graduate chiropodist who always uses antiseptic measures in treating the feet.

The chiropodist works under difficulty because in the great majority of cases, the patient must be on his feet and carry on his work immediately after receiving treatment. He does not have an opporunity to rest his feet properly.

An idea of the importance of chiropody to health, happiness and production can be seen in the establishment of chiropody clinics in our general hospitals. Just as there are rheumatism clinics, heart clinics, chest clinics, diabetes clinics, so are some hospitals equipped to take care of the feet.

In The Canadian Medical Association Journal, we read that "following the example set two years ago by the Vancouver General Hospital, St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver has opened a chiropody clinic for use in connection with the outpatient clinics of the hospital. The members of the chiropody profession installed at their own expense the equipment necessary for the clinic. If the experience of the clinic at the Vancouver General Hospital is any guide, this clinic will rapidly become one of the busiest and most useful units of the outpatinet department under whose control it is operated."

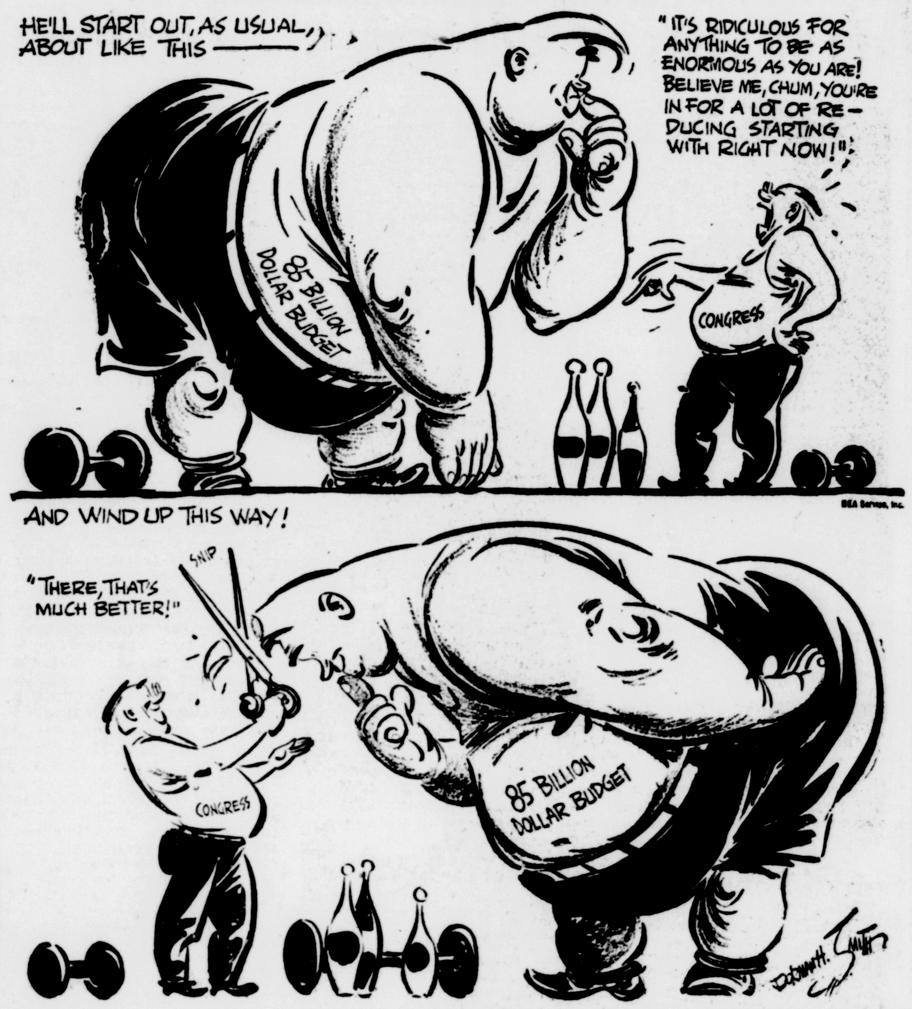

Fortunately also, our shoe manufacturers are turning out better and more comfortably designed shoes, shoes wide enough and long enough to prevent crowding of the feet. The narrow shoes of former years are responsible for most of the cases of crippled feet found today.

If He Follows the Precedent Set by Himself

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington—President Truman is holding his political cards so close to his chest that not even his closest associates at the White House know his plans.

Even Charley Murphy, good-natured White House assistant, confessed to a friend the other day: "I don't know any more than the man in the moon whether Mr. Truman is going to run."

Actually, the President seems to enjoy playing a game with both his staff and visitors. At one moment, Mr. Truman will put on a long face and describe in great detail the trials of being President. A frequent remark is: "Two terms will kill any man."

The next minute, the President will casually comment how he is looking forward to a grass-roots campaign in the fall, and slyly watch his guest's startled reaction. This on-again-off-again, keep-'em-guessing game was partly behind his final decision to leave his name in the New Hampshire primary. The other reason was the pleas of Democratic leaders in New Hampshire that they would lose their places on the state and national committees if he did not leave his name in.

Best guess of Mr. Truman's intimates is that he is carefully laying the groundwork for a "draft Truman" campaign after the boomlets for all the other candidates have run their course.

Army Waste

Here is another painful example of how the army wastes the taxpayers' money—the story of Commerce International, Inc., which got a $3,406,000 contract from the Rock Island Arsenal for reconditioning tanks.

It seems hard to believe, but Commerce International got the contract despite the fact that it had no experience in reconditioning tanks, and despite the fact that it had few facilities except some space rented from Cramp's Shipyard in Philadelphia.

The company was formed by a young ex-air force lieutenant, S. G. Fassoulis. Once he had talked himself into the contract, Fassoulis rounded up welders and technicians and went to work. However, lack of technical skill bogged him down and resulted in costly delays.

Luckily for Fassoulis, however, the army failed to deliver certain parts on schedule, so he had the consummate nerve to turn around and blame the army for the delay. On top of this, believe it or not, he demanded $817,000 in damages.

The army refused to pay. Nevertheless Fassoulis' counterclaim had the desired effect. He got off the hook for defaulting on his contract.

But here is the real joker.

Inspector General Said No

This column is able to reveal that Fassoulis was awarded the $3,400,000 contract by the army against the advice of the army's inspector general.

The inspector general had checked commerce international, found it was involved in some juicy deals of war surplus to Nationalist China.

One deal that didn't go through was for 25 P-51s, which Commerce International was trying to sell to China at double the normal cost. The contract was canceled when the Chinese found the planes to be little better than junk.

Commerce International was also involved in smuggling airplane parts to Formosa. But when the army confronted Fassoulis with this record, he blandly claimed it was Communist propaganda, argued he had gone into the business of supplying Nationalist China not for profit but for patriotic reasons.

He even made the amazing statement that he had supplied Chiang Kai-shek with $12,600,000 worth of military equipment for less than $2,000,000. He failed to explain how he could afford to take the difference between $12,600,000 and $2,000,000 as a loss.

Despite this record, the army ignored the inspector general and gave Fassoulis its tank-reconditioning contract—only later to have him fall fat.

Joe and Herman

Sen. Herman Welker, the Idaho freshman, protested loudly at a closed-door rules committee meeting that he was no "McCarthy stooge."

The outburst came after Welker was named to the subcommittee to investigate the tactics of his buddy, Joe McCarthy.

"I don't know what to tell my daughter when she hears all these things the columnists and commentators are calling me," the senator from Idaho complained.

Looking around the committee for a sympathetic face, he noticed Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

"Why, I'm no more biased in favor of McCarthy than Mrs. Smith," he said.

Note—Mrs. Smith is the author of the famous "statement of conscience" opposing McCarthy's smear tactics, and had favored an investigation of McCarthy from the very first.

Moscow Feud

Ambassador Alan Kirk, retiring as ambassador to Moscow, has handed in a sensational farewell report that a deadly feud has broken out in the Politburo over who is to succeed Prime Minister Stalin.

Kirk reports that Molotov and Malenkov, the Soviet production boss, are openly vying for power and lining up support within the Politburo for themselves.

Stalin is reported enjoying the spectacle and so far has made no move to intervene or designate his successor. Winner of this grim struggle undoubtedly will be the man who gets the support of Marshal Beria, head of Russia's secret police. As yet, Beria has stayed out of the fight.

Capital News Capsules

Communist Burma? — The American delegation to the UN, alarmed at the threat of Communist attack on Burma, has appealed secretly to the jittery Burmese government to have it ask the United Nations to send a watchdog commission to Burma immediately in order to guard against invasion. Some U. S. delegates, however, think it's already too late and that, by midsummer, Burma will be another Russian satellite.

Spies in Soviet—The Russians are having Joe McCarthy scares too. The Kremlin is so alarmed over military information leaking to us that it has banned German servants from working for Russians in East Germany, has built high fences around its airfields, has added new restrictions on American military attaches behind the Iron Curtain, has even cut off nonclassified technical magazines from western sources.

A U. S. Ban on Television Liquor Ads Is Called Against Constitution

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Feb. 7—They are tampering with an important principle of constitutional government in the hearings on the proposed bill to pass a federal law prohibiting the use of radio or television to sell intoxicating beverages.

Congress has absolutely no constitutional power to regulate the sale of intoxicating beverages. The people, by the vote of two-thirds of both Houses of Congress and three-fourths of the states, in convention assembled, decided to take away from the federal government all power to regulate the liquor traffic which had been previously prohibited in the 18th Amendment.

The new 21st Amendment repeals explicitly the 18th Amendment, and this means that the Congress has no more rights over the sale of liquors than over other articles of commerce, and specifically none that interfere with the right of any medium of expression to be used to sell products which are in themselves lawful to manufacture.

It was precisely by this method of indirection—the passage of a law at first limiting sales of beer to a certain content—that the nation was led step by step into the tragic experience with Prohibition—an era which brought the modern gangster and the vice of the underworld, because it made bootlegging profitable.

If the nation has changed its mind about the Prohibition question, the forthright way for the "drys" to proceed would be to introduce another proposed amendment giving the Federal government complete power again over the commerce in liquors.

Even the radio and television-station spokesmen have made the mistake of conceding that the sale of hard liquors over their networks could be injurious, for they point with pride to their own code which by voluntary agreement causes the stations to refrain from accepting programs for the sale of such products. This is to admit that there is something wrong with the sale of such articles by radio and television and not through other media of expression, including the mails. If it's bad for the articles to be mentioned in one medium that comes into the home, it is bad for all other media too.

The principal, moreover, is one that goes to the heart of constitutional rights. For if the sale of a beverage can be prohibited by Congress because of a belief that it can be used to excess, so also can the sale of any other article that could be harmful to health be tabooed.

Thus there are probably more deaths and injuries due to motor car accidents on the highway than to any other single cause. Does Congress have the right to prohibit the sale of automobiles and trucks? Does Congress have the right to prohibit the sale of aspirin tablets because some people use them to excess? Does Congress have the right to prohibit, in times of peace, the sale of hunting weapons because those same weapons can be used to kill or maim human beings instead of wild animals? Isn't it today the province of the states to regulate by law the cases of those individuals who wrongfully use any article to excess and become a danger to their fellow citizens?

The answer is that there is no clause in the Constitution which permits Congress to legislate such prohibitions on moral grounds. Indeed, there has arisen even a stricter ban on the right of Congress to legislate on the liquor traffic. It has been held that, when the people spoke their views on the 18th Amendment and repealed it, they said specifically that Congress had no right to pass any laws governing the manufacture of intoxicating beverages, that such prohibitions could be put into effect only by the several states, and that the federal power existed solely to stop importation into those states which passed laws prohibiting importation of intoxicating beverages. There is no mention of the word "sale" in the 21st Amendment, and it is within the Constitution now for intoxicating beverages to be offered for sale by mail or otherwise even in so-called dry states, but delivery must be taken outside the dry states.

For Congress now to pass any bill forbidding radio and television to broadcast sales messages concerning liquors would also run afoul of the 1st Amendment to the Constitution, which says that the right of expression shall not be abridged by any law of Congress.

If it be argued that Congress has acquired a right of prohibition through the fact that radio and television stations are licensed by the Federal government, then the answer is that Congress cannot censor the content of radio programs except within those limitations of fraud or obscenity which are recognized by the Supreme Court as qualifying the right of free speech and freedom of the press.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Bad Godesberg, Germany—The official title of Shepard Stone, who is forcing "democratic culture" down the gullet of the population of West Germany, is "Director of Public Affairs." He is the big wheel of the Roosevelt-Acheson-Truman bureaucracy in Germany. He is officially subordinate to John J. McCloy, the American high commissioner, but he has a strong, aggressive personality and some dogmatic ideas on right and wrong thinking and it has occurred to me that he might be the real high commissioner. That sometimes happens in the strange, mysterious operations of a bureaucracy grown to monstrous size. The same thought has occurred to other Americans here and in Frankfurt who have been watching Mr. Stone's smoke for a long time.

Incidentally, I should explain that Bad Godesberg is a Rhine resort city just a step from Bonn where the high commission has put up a sort of Pentagon for its staff. I have been shacking in a hotel done in the same architectural whim, called the Godesberg Hof, which is run by the State Department as an accommodation for VIP's—or very important people. I riffled the register for several weeks and found no recognizable names. The guests described themselves in the register as colonels, captains, consuls and "civilians" and it seems that most of them are transients.

There is a conventional small bar and just a few steps from the bar is an auditorium which is used for dances, movies and religious services other than Catholic, all of which struck me as a more authentic expression of American "culture" than Mr. Stone's calculated and self-conscious propaganda. Of course there are plenty of local religious facilities for Catholics in this part of the world.

I have met few bureaucrats as self-satisfied as Mr. Stone seemed to me. The late Harold Ickes comes to mind. Henry Wallace is another of the same type, although old bubblehead dissembled his smugness with a drooling affection of selflessness and modesty. Mr. Stone is a well-built, physically alert fellow of about 45, who feels that his experience as a student in a German college before Hitler and his command of the German language qualify him as an ambassador, even a commissar, of culture. These qualifications are by no means rare and Mr. Stone's political belief probably is the most important asset he has beside his effrontery. He controls the biggest bureaucracy in the Hicog administration with 400 employes in various categories, out of a total of 1538 on the entire payroll, and his bureau of "public affairs" is a powerful, irresponsible propaganda machine under the firm control of one aggressive, highly opinionated, arbitrary man. Stone runs 38 libraries in Germany, a daily paper, a monthly magazine and the big radio station called RIAS, in Berlin.

I have mentioned this before but I do so again in order to emphasize for your consideration the fact that this man is on leave from the Sunday department of the New York Times whose editorial flavor, choice of writers and treatment of topics has not been recognizably anti-Communist in the judgment of many of us cauliflowered old veteran Red-baiters. Stone says he is thoroughly anti-Communist and when he remarked that the Sunday section of the Times was anti-Communist, too, I said I would have to disagree. Stone then said I wouldn't dare say that to "Mr. Sulzberger." I don't know which one he meant, father or son, but I replied that I had already commented in print on the interesting political complexion of this Sunday section. I am sorry I did not think to mention a memorable story by one of the Sulzbergers filed from Germany a few years ago, reporting with some editorial color, that an American colonel had issued a manifest bawling out his troops, who obviously had more sense than he

"The King is dead; long live the Queen." With this traditional phrase, pronounced without pause, Britons accept the passing of one monarch and the ascension of another. Spoken all in one breath the simple sentence is an expression of the continuity of the Crown. The Crown is a symbol of the strong cord which ties present day Great Britain to its glorious past.

King George VI was well loved by his subjects. His reign was troubled and comparatively short. He came to the throne in 1936 with his country in the grip of the Great Depression. Europe seethed and in Germany a madman already plotted the war which was to see Englishmen, in the words of Winston Churchill, rise to "their finest hour." King George reigned with the majesty and dignity that Britons have come to expect of their monarchs.

Queen Elizabeth, already secure in the affection of the people who grew to love her as a princess, has been trained since the age of ten for the duty she was to fulfill. In Great Britain the monarchy is constitutional; Kings and Queens reign but do not rule. Yet the throne, held above the dissensions of politics, can be a strong influence on the Prime Minister and upon the Parliament. Queen Elizabeth is ready for this responsibility.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill stands ready to aid his new Queen at the beginning of her reign. His experience in governing dates to the reign of Queen Victoria. The throne will have his hard won experience and counsel besides the vigor and youthful outlook of the 25 year-old Elizabeth.

The world joins England in mourning the passing of King George, and hails the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The King is dead; long live the Queen.

STATE TAX INFORMATION RETURNS

Employer information returns for New York State's personal income tax are due February 15. The returns for 4,500,000 employes from 250,000 employers are due two weeks earlier than last year as a result of 1951 legislation. Last year information returns were due March 1.

Employer information returns are reports of compensation paid to employes during the preceding year. These reports are later matched against state income tax returns filed by individuals as a check on delinquency.

The reports are required from every employer covering all of his resident employes who received more than $1,100 in 1951, if single, or more than $2,750, if married.

It will be noted that the information report requirements cover employes who receive $1,100 or more, if single, and $2,750 or more, if married. However, state personal income tax returns must be filed by single persons with net income of $1,000 or more; married couples with net income of $2,500 or more. The reason for this difference is that on information returns, allowance is made for the flat 10 per cent deduction provision in the income tax law.

The driver who imbibes too freely may find himself listed in the papers as a man of extinction.

MEDALS FOR MARINERS

A bill has been introduced into the Senate which would authorize the Maritime Commission to award medals and decorations to merchant seamen who perform especially meritorious service. The Commission would have liked to make such an award recently to Captain Henrik Kurt Carlsen for his effort to save his ship, the Flying Enterprise. The Commission found that it was without power to do so. A bill authorizing a Korean war service ribbon for merchant sailors in the area has also been introduced.

The men who have sailed in the American Merchant Marine through the years have compiled an enviable record of courage and service. During the two world wars they braved the submarine menace, and many lost their lives or suffered shipwreck to deliver American supplies and troops to the battlefronts. Their service is worthy of special recognition and honor, in peace and in war.

THE BLACK LIST

Certain commentators, actors, directors and writers are finding it extremely difficult to get employment in the movies, radio and television. Employers find that their presence on any picture or program encounters excessive sales resistance and that therefore any product with which they are associated is defective from a business standpoint.

This is altogether true of two categories: those who have been exposed as Communist Party members at hearings of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and those who have taken advantage of the Fifth Amendment to refuse to answer questions. While the Fifth Amendment is one of our greatest rights, namely, that a person may not be required to incriminate himself, public opinion accepts such a plea as equivalent to admitting guilt.

Another group, curiously, that finds it difficult to get employment in the motion picture industry are those who since 1947 have been testifying before Congressional committees. The so-called statesmen of that industry apparently take the position that those who disclosed the Communists have embarrassed them and should be punished. Many of them are actually unemployed.

The Authors' League, which is a sort of writers' trade union, has addressed a letter to Wayne Coy, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, protesting the Black List. This document is signed by Rex Stout, as president, and announces a committee consisting of himself as chairman, Oscar Hammerstein 2nd, John Hersey and Elmer Rice, which, while it opposes blacklisting, takes no position on Communism.

The heart of the documents is:

"We know, of course, that your attention has been repeatedly called to the denial of employment by radio and television producers to individuals because of their alleged political affiliations or beliefs. We are aware that the FCC has no power to control the employment policies of sponsors of radio and television programs. But we are also aware that the FCC does have power to regulate licensees, whose conduct does not serve the public interest. The practice of blacklisting has spread to such an alarming extent that it has gone far beyond isolated acts of specific individuals and has assumed the proportions of what may properly be characterized as an industry policy, which involves not only sponsors and producers but networks and individual station licensees, and thus brings the matter clearly within the jurisdiction of the FCC."

Several questions have to be asked here:

1. Do these gentlemen want the FCC to refuse licenses to stations that reject Communists?

2. Does not that put a Communist in a privileged position, namely, that whereas a Republican or a Democrat may be refused employment, a Communist must be given employment if he says that he is a Communist?

3. Must a sponsor accept a Communist as a writer, director or actor even if the public clearly indicates that it will not use the product?

4. Has the FCC any right, under the legislation bringing it into existence, to intervene in such a matter at all?

One of the issues not raised in this letter is "Counterattack" and "Red Channels"—publications which compile data on the activities of Communists. A good share of their data comes from reports of Congressional and legislative committees and testimony in the courts.

The position generally taken by those who oppose blacklisting is that the movie, radio and television industry should ignore "Counterattack" and "Red Channels." Experience shows that the public will not ignore these publications or the data which they contain, however published. Simply stated, the exhibitors dare not disregard this issue.

This is a vexed problem which cannot be lightly treated. Freedom of thought and freedom of speech are among our greatest heritages. It would damage our country if a goose-step literature were all that is available to us. Men should be able to write and speak without fear, and certainly without the fear of unemployment.

On the other hand, Communists have been established in our courts and before Congressional committees as disciplined agents of a foreign government, now our enemy. To Rex Stout, I put this question:

Have you ever protected a Nazi or a Fascist in his rights of freedom of expression as you now seek, in this letter, to protect Communists?

It would seem that that alone is the test of sincerity.

CARE FOR THE FEET

I write often about the importance of the feet, how healthy feet, free from corns, bunions, hammertoes, fallen arches, mean that a man or woman setting out to put in a useful day can be assured of accomplishing this purpose.

I have written before about a United States President whose feet were such a torment that at times he was unable to be his own gentlemanly self and was uncivil and rude to those about him.

Fortunately, now that it is known that the feet are as important as the head in making a living, the profession of chiropody, sometimes called podometry, has come into its own. At Harvard and other universities a four-year course in chiropody is given, the graduates in which are performing a wonderful service to mankind.

The general physician, in most cases, is not equipped with the instruments, knowledge and technique to handles these cases of sore, painful feet and is quite willing to refer such patients to a graduate chiropodist who always uses antiseptic measures in treating the feet.

The chiropodist works under difficulty because in the great majority of cases, the patient must be on his feet and carry on his work immediately after receiving treatment. He does not have an opporunity to rest his feet properly.

An idea of the importance of chiropody to health, happiness and production can be seen in the establishment of chiropody clinics in our general hospitals. Just as there are rheumatism clinics, heart clinics, chest clinics, diabetes clinics, so are some hospitals equipped to take care of the feet.

In The Canadian Medical Association Journal, we read that "following the example set two years ago by the Vancouver General Hospital, St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver has opened a chiropody clinic for use in connection with the outpatient clinics of the hospital. The members of the chiropody profession installed at their own expense the equipment necessary for the clinic. If the experience of the clinic at the Vancouver General Hospital is any guide, this clinic will rapidly become one of the busiest and most useful units of the outpatinet department under whose control it is operated."

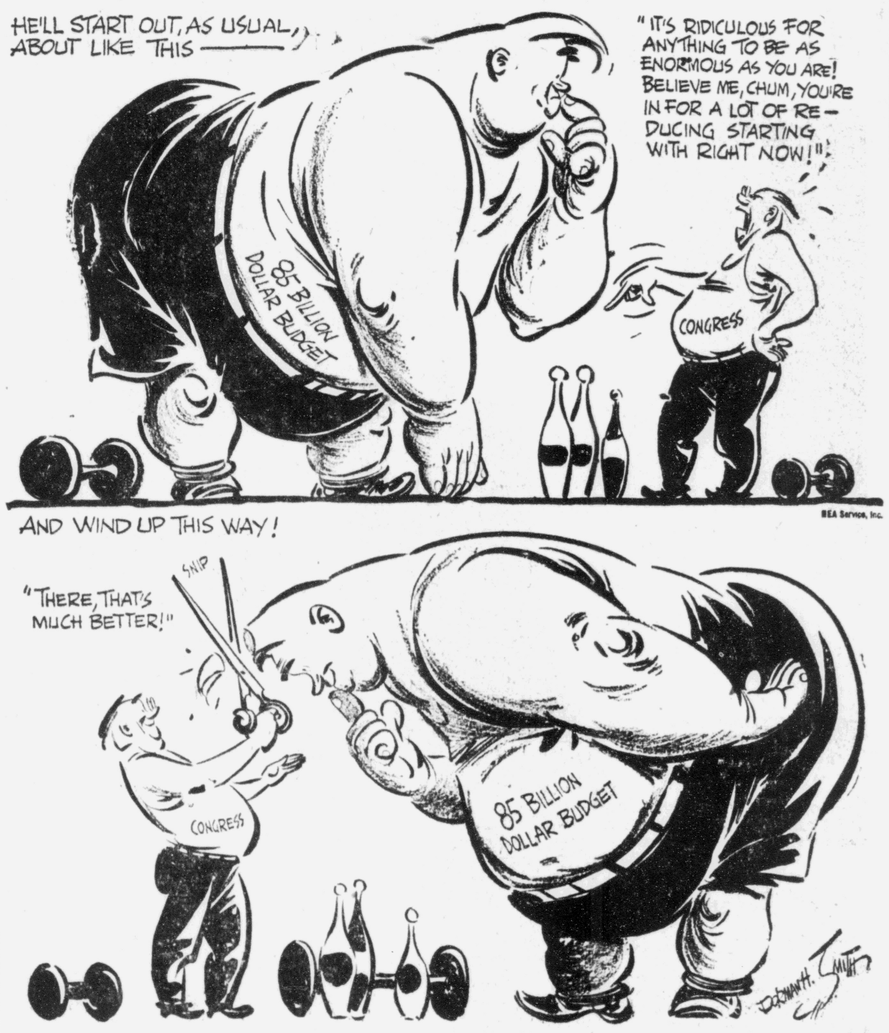

Fortunately also, our shoe manufacturers are turning out better and more comfortably designed shoes, shoes wide enough and long enough to prevent crowding of the feet. The narrow shoes of former years are responsible for most of the cases of crippled feet found today.

If He Follows the Precedent Set by Himself

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington—President Truman is holding his political cards so close to his chest that not even his closest associates at the White House know his plans.

Even Charley Murphy, good-natured White House assistant, confessed to a friend the other day: "I don't know any more than the man in the moon whether Mr. Truman is going to run."

Actually, the President seems to enjoy playing a game with both his staff and visitors. At one moment, Mr. Truman will put on a long face and describe in great detail the trials of being President. A frequent remark is: "Two terms will kill any man."

The next minute, the President will casually comment how he is looking forward to a grass-roots campaign in the fall, and slyly watch his guest's startled reaction. This on-again-off-again, keep-'em-guessing game was partly behind his final decision to leave his name in the New Hampshire primary. The other reason was the pleas of Democratic leaders in New Hampshire that they would lose their places on the state and national committees if he did not leave his name in.

Best guess of Mr. Truman's intimates is that he is carefully laying the groundwork for a "draft Truman" campaign after the boomlets for all the other candidates have run their course.

Army Waste

Here is another painful example of how the army wastes the taxpayers' money—the story of Commerce International, Inc., which got a $3,400,000 contract from the Rock Island Arsenal for reconditioning tanks.

It seems hard to believe, but Commerce International got the contract despite the fact that it had no experience in reconditioning tanks, and despite the fact that it had few facilities except some space rented from Cramp's Shipyard in Philadelphia.

The company was formed by a young ex-air force lieutenant, S. G. Fassoulis. Once he had talked himself into the contract, Fassoulis rounded up welders and technicians and went to work. However, lack of technical skill bogged him down and resulted in costly delays.

Luckily for Fassoulis, however, the army failed to deliver certain parts on schedule, so he had the consummate nerve to turn around and blame the army for the delay. On top of this, believe it or not, he demanded $817,000 in damages.

The army refused to pay. Nevertheless Fassoulis' counterclaim had the desired effect. He got off the hook for defaulting on his contract.

But here is the real joker.

Inspector General Said No

This column is able to reveal that Fassoulis was awarded the $3,400,000 contract by the army against the advice of the army's inspector general.

The inspector general had checked commerce international, found it was involved in some juicy deals of war surplus to Nationalist China.

One deal that didn't go through was for 25 P-51s, which Commerce International was trying to sell to China at double the normal cost. The contract was canceled when the Chinese found the planes to be little better than junk.

Commerce International was also involved in smuggling airplane parts to Formosa. But when the army confronted Fassoulis with this record, he blandly claimed it was Communist propaganda, argued he had gone into the business of supplying Nationalist China not for profit but for patriotic reasons.

He even made the amazing statement that he had supplied Chiang Kai-shek with $12,600,000 worth of military equipment for less than $2,000,000. He failed to explain how he could afford to take the difference between $12,600,000 and $2,000,000 as a loss.

Despite this record, the army ignored the inspector general and gave Fassoulis its tank-reconditioning contract—only later to have him fall fat.

Joe and Herman

Sen. Herman Welker, the Idaho freshman, protested loudly at a closed-door rules committee meeting that he was no "McCarthy stooge."

The outburst came after Welker was named to the subcommittee to investigate the tactics of his buddy, Joe McCarthy.

"I don't know what to tell my daughter when she hears all these things the columnists and commentators are calling me," the senator from Idaho complained.

Looking around the committee for a sympathetic face, he noticed Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

"Why, I'm no more biased in favor of McCarthy than Mrs. Smith," he said.

Note—Mrs. Smith is the author of the famous "statement of conscience" opposing McCarthy's smear tactics, and had favored an investigation of McCarthy from the very first.

Moscow Feud

Ambassador Alan Kirk, retiring as ambassador to Moscow, has handed in a sensational farewell report that a deadly feud has broken out in the Politburo over who is to succeed Prime Minister Stalin.

Kirk reports that Molotov and Malenkov, the Soviet production boss, are openly vying for power and lining up support within the Politburo for themselves.

Stalin is reported enjoying the spectacle and so far has made no move to intervene or designate his successor. Winner of this grim struggle undoubtedly will be the man who gets the support of Marshal Beria, head of Russia's secret police. As yet, Beria has stayed out of the fight.

Capital News Capsules

Communist Burma? — The American delegation to the UN, alarmed at the threat of Communist attack on Burma, has appealed secretly to the jittery Burmese government to have it ask the United Nations to send a watchdog commission to Burma immediately in order to guard against invasion. Some U. S. delegates, however, think it's already too late and that, by midsummer, Burma will be another Russian satellite.

Spies in Soviet—The Russians are having Joe McCarthy scares too. The Kremlin is so alarmed over military information leaking to us that it has banned German servants from working for Russians in East Germany, has built high fences around its airfields, has added new restrictions on American military attaches behind the Iron Curtain, has even cut off nonclassified technical magazines from western sources.

A U. S. Ban on Television Liquor Ads Is Called Against Constitution

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Feb. 7—They are tampering with an important principle of constitutional government in the hearings on the proposed bill to pass a federal law prohibiting the use of radio or television to sell intoxicating beverages.

Congress has absolutely no constitutional power to regulate the sale of intoxicating beverages. The people, by the vote of two-thirds of both Houses of Congress and three-fourths of the states, in convention assembled, decided to take away from the federal government all power to regulate the liquor traffic which had been previously prohibited in the 18th Amendment.

The new 21st Amendment repeals explicitly the 18th Amendment, and this means that the Congress has no more rights over the sale of liquors than over other articles of commerce, and specifically none that interfere with the right of any medium of expression to be used to sell products which are in themselves lawful to manufacture.

It was precisely by this method of indirection—the passage of a law at first limiting sales of beer to a certain content—that the nation was led step by step into the tragic experience with Prohibition—an era which brought the modern gangster and the vice of the underworld, because it made bootlegging profitable.

If the nation has changed its mind about the Prohibition question, the forthright way for the "drys" to proceed would be to introduce another proposed amendment giving the Federal government complete power again over the commerce in liquors.

Even the radio and television-station spokesmen have made the mistake of conceding that the sale of hard liquors over their networks could be injurious, for they point with pride to their own code which by voluntary agreement causes the stations to refrain from accepting programs for the sale of such products. This is to admit that there is something wrong with the sale of such articles by radio and television and not through other media of expression, including the mails. If it's bad for the articles to be mentioned in one medium that comes into the home, it is bad for all other media too.

The principal, moreover, is one that goes to the heart of constitutional rights. For if the sale of a beverage can be prohibited by Congress because of a belief that it can be used to excess, so also can the sale of any other article that could be harmful to health be tabooed.

Thus there are probably more deaths and injuries due to motor car accidents on the highway than to any other single cause. Does Congress have the right to prohibit the sale of automobiles and trucks? Does Congress have the right to prohibit the sale of aspirin tablets because some people use them to excess? Does Congress have the right to prohibit, in times of peace, the sale of hunting weapons because those same weapons can be used to kill or maim human beings instead of wild animals? Isn't it today the province of the states to regulate by law the cases of those individuals who wrongfully use any article to excess and become a danger to their fellow citizens?

The answer is that there is no clause in the Constitution which permits Congress to legislate such prohibitions on moral grounds. Indeed, there has arisen even a stricter ban on the right of Congress to legislate on the liquor traffic. It has been held that, when the people spoke their views on the 18th Amendment and repealed it, they said specifically that Congress had no right to pass any laws governing the manufacture of intoxicating beverages, that such prohibitions could be put into effect only by the several states, and that the federal power existed solely to stop importation into those states which passed laws prohibiting importation of intoxicating beverages. There is no mention of the word "sale" in the 21st Amendment, and it is within the Constitution now for intoxicating beverages to be offered for sale by mail or otherwise even in so-called dry states, but delivery must be taken outside the dry states.

For Congress now to pass any bill forbidding radio and television to broadcast sales messages concerning liquors would also run afoul of the 1st Amendment to the Constitution, which says that the right of expression shall not be abridged by any law of Congress.

If it be argued that Congress has acquired a right of prohibition through the fact that radio and television stations are licensed by the Federal government, then the answer is that Congress cannot censor the content of radio programs except within those limitations of fraud or obscenity which are recognized by the Supreme Court as qualifying the right of free speech and freedom of the press.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Bad Godesberg, Germany—The official title of Shepard Stone, who is forcing "democratic culture" down the gullet of the population of West Germany, is "Director of Public Affairs." He is the big wheel of the Roosevelt-Acheson-Truman bureaucracy in Germany. He is officially subordinate to John J. McCloy, the American high commissioner, but he has a strong, aggressive personality and some dogmatic ideas on right and wrong thinking and it has occurred to me that he might be the real high commissioner. That sometimes happens in the strange, mysterious operations of a bureaucracy grown to monstrous size. The same thought has occurred to other Americans here and in Frankfurt who have been watching Mr. Stone's smoke for a long time.

Incidentally, I should explain that Bad Godesberg is a Rhine resort city just a step from Bonn where the high commission has put up a sort of Pentagon for its staff. I have been shacking in a hotel done in the same architectural whim, called the Godesberg Hof, which is run by the State Department as an accommodation for VIP's—or very important people. I riffled the register for several weeks and found no recognizable names. The guests described themselves in the register as colonels, captains, consuls and "civilians" and it seems that most of them are transients.

There is a conventional small bar and just a few steps from the bar is an auditorium which is used for dances, movies and religious services other than Catholic, all of which struck me as a more authentic expression of American "culture" than Mr. Stone's calculated and self-conscious propaganda. Of course there are plenty of local religious facilities for Catholics in this part of the world.

I have met few bureaucrats as self-satisfied as Mr. Stone seemed to me. The late Harold Ickes comes to mind. Henry Wallace is another of the same type, although old bubblehead dissembled his smugness with a drooling affection of selflessness and modesty. Mr. Stone is a well-built, physically alert fellow of about 45, who feels that his experience as a student in a German college before Hitler and his command of the German language qualify him as an ambassador, even a commissar, of culture. The Eventful Life of Queen Juliana of The Netherlands

Spanned 2 World Wars And Great Depression

Was Resident of Canada During Nazi Occupied of Her Country—Born in 1909, Inaugurated Queen in 1948

The eventful life of Queen Juliana of The Netherlands, who will visit Kingston on April 5, has spanned two World Wars, a depression, a period of residence in Canada while Nazi Germans occupied her country, and a period of strenuous recovery efforts in her war-torn, starved country.

Her forthcoming visit to Kingston, it is believed, will be the first time in this city's history that it has been visited by a reigning monarch.

Queen Juliana is a member of the House of Orange-Nassau, the founder of which also founded the Dutch nation. It was also in the dynasty of Orange-Nassau that the first Dutch settlers came to this area 300 years ago.

Queen Juliana was born April 30, 1909, daughter of Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands and of Prince Henry of The Netherlands, Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

Her given names were Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina. Juliana, as she was to be called, was the name of the mother of William the Silent, founder of the Dutch nation and founder of the dynasty of Orange-Nassau. The other women for whom she was named were Louise de Coligny, William the Silent's fourth wife; Queen Emma, who was Queen Wilhelmina's mother; Grand Duchess Marie of Mecklenburg, Juliana's other grandmother; and Queen Wilhelmina herself.

First Years of Life

The first years of the life of "Juliaantje," as the Dutch people called her, were no different from those of any other child. Pictures of this period show her in the sandbox, riding a Shetland pony or playing with her dolls. These years were mostly spent at "Het Loo," a palace originally built as a hunting lodge in the eastern part of the country.

In 1914, when World War 1 broke out, The Netherlands succeeded in keeping out of the struggle; but Queen Wilhelmina found it necessary to remain in The Hague, the seat of the government, during the four war years.

Princess Juliana's early education was in a private class led by Miss B. Cohen Stuart, who followed the methods of Jan Ligthart, then Holland's most progressive educator. Her education was much more liberal than that of her mother.

Five foreign languages—French, German, English, Latin and Greek—were taught the young princess in addition to her native Dutch. She also was tutored in history, geography, constitutional law, economics, mathematics and physics. Se took violin lessons for five years, and meanwhile learned to ride a horse and a bicycle, and to skate.

Princess Juliana often accompanied her parents on trips to the various parts of the country, and soon after World War 1 she started taking some of her vacations abroad, in Norway, England and Switzerland. On one of these occasions she was offered the honorary citizenship of Geneva in commemoration of the relations which have always existed between the House of Orange and Geneva, the city of Calvin.

On April 30, 1927, her 18th birthday, Princess Juliana became of age, according to the Contitution, and received her own income, her own household staff and her own palace, the Kneuterdijk Palace, quite near the Royal Palace at The Hague. On June 12 of that year she was made a member of the Dutch Reformed Church in a solemn service conducted by the Rev. Willem L. Welter.

Her coming of age entitled her to assume her first political function: she was installed as a member of the State Council, the queen's highest advisory body. From that year on she always accompanied the queen in the "golden coach" on the third Tuesday in September for the annual opening of Parliament.

Enters University

In September, 1927, she entered the University in Leiden. She did not study incognito, as was expected, but became a regular student and member of the Women Student's Club. The club's "Song of the Year" was anonymously submitted by her and it won the prize offered to the best contestant. She also wrote the play which the freshmen traditionally perform at the end of their novitiate. It was a parody on the fairy tale of Bluebeard and showed a modern Bluebeard in the role of a psychiatrist who wants to test his wife.

During her university years, the Princess lived with several of her girl friends in a country house at the seashore, one hour's distance from Leiden. She studied Dutch literature, Indonesian law, international law, ethnology and history. An honorary degree in literature and philosophy was conferred upon her.

As the Princess was finishing her studies, the economic world depression of the thirties hit The Netherlands. Hundreds of thousands were thrown out of work. The Government introduced special relief legislation, but it was Princess Juliana who rallied some 60 outstanding citizens around her in an effort to supplement the government measures with private enterprise.

On her personal initiative a "National Crisis Committee" was formed to help alleviate the social distress caused by the depression. For the next five years, she gave much of her time to this committee, of which she became honorary chairman. In June, 1934, on her father's death, she became president of the Netherlands Red Cross.

Although, quite naturally, there had been much speculation as to Princess Juliana's marriage, the announcement of her engagement to the German Prince Bernhard of Lippe-Biesterfeld on September 8, 1936, came as a complete surprise. The two young people had met for the first time in the winter of 1935-36 in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, where the Olympic Winter Games were held.

As the German Nazi regime was not very popular with the Dutch people, careful investigations as to the political ideas of the future husband of the future Queen had to precede the final approval of both Queen Wilhelmina and the Government. Research upheld the young prince's record.

(The confidence shown in Prince Bernhard in approving the marriage was fully justified by his behavior during World War 2.)

Weds Prince Bernhard

Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard were married in St. James' Church in The Hague on January 7, 1937. The Dutch people gave the young couple a motor yacht as a wedding gift. After a honeymoon in Krynica, Poland, and in Budapest, Rome and Paris, they moved into a restored and modernized Soestdijk Palace, the former residence of the late Queen Emma.

A little more than a year after their marriage the birth of Princess Beatrix brought assurance that the rule of the dynasty of Orange-Massau over The Netherlands would continue after Princess Juliana. A second daughter, Princess Irene, was born August 5, 1939.

On May 10, 1940, the Germans invaded Holland. The outmoded Dutch army was no equal match for the German pantzer divisions, and despite the gallant stand of the Dutch at the Grebbe Line, it soon became apparent that the enemy would reach The Hague in a matter of days.

Princess Juliana and her two small children left The Hague the evening of May 12, in an armored truck of The Netherlands Bank. At Ijmuiden, outport of Amsterdam, they boarded the British destroyer Codrington, which brought them to England.

The next day, Queen Wilhelmina also left The Hague and reluctantly set course for England, from where she was to lead the resistance of the free Dutch. Prince Bernhard stayed with the Allied troops on the continent until shortly before the British evacuation at Dunkirk.

After a short time in England, Princess Juliana in June, 1940, accepted an invitation from her aunt, Princess Alice, wife of Canada's Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone, to come to this dominion. The trip from England to Canada was made, in all secrecy, on the Dutch cruiser Sumatra.

During the five war years, Princess Juliana lived in a simple house in Ottawa, with the Princesses Beatrix and Irene, her friend Mrs. Roell and her daughter, the children's nurse Miss Sophia Feith, her secretary Willem Tets and his wife, and three Dutch secret service men.

Her third daughter, Princess Margriet, was born in Canada on January 19, 1943. In order that she could be born on Dutch soil, a Canadian law had previously been pased stating that wherever the royal child would be born that particular spot would be Netherlands territory at the time. The Netherlands Merchant Marine stood as godfather to the little princess.

Princess Juliana made frequent visits to the United States from her residence in Canada. Her first trip was in December, 1940, when she was guest of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. In 1941 she received honorary degrees from Hope College, Holland, Mich., Mount Holyoke College and Princeton University. The same honor was bestowed upon her the following year by Central College, Pella Iowa, another center of Dutch immigration in the United States. The 1942 and 1944 summer vacations were spent in the Berkshires and on Cape Cod.

In September, 1944, she returned to England but came back to Canada after the ill-fated battle of Arnhem shattered all hopes for an early liberation.

After the war, Princess Juliana became especially interested in the work of the Netherlands National Recovery Foundation, which aimed to bring relief to tens of thousands in a war-torn and starved country.

A fourth daughter, Princess Marijke, was born February 18, 1947.

Inaugurated Queen in 1948

Queen Wilhelmina, tired of the burden she had carried for 50 years, announced her desire to abdicate in favor of her only daughter, and on September 6, 1948, Princess Juliana was inaugurated as Queen of The Netherlands in a solemn service in the 15th century New Church at Amsterdam, the nation's capital.

In a speech delivered before taking the oath on the Constitution, she said, "I have been called to a task so heavy that no one has the least notion of it would desire it, but at the same time so splendid that I can only say, 'Who am I that I should be allowed to perform it?' The possibilities thereby afforded me to work for the cause of the common good are so great that I am willing...to follow the calling for which my parents prepared me with so much care."

Perhaps the most historic task Queen Juliana had to perform since her inauguration was that of presiding over the meeting on December 27, 1949, at which the 300-year-old sovereignty of The Netherlands over its Asian empire was transferred to the independent republic of Indonesia.

Since assuming her royal duties, Queen Juliana has paid official visits to three Allied countries: France, Great Britain and Luxembourg. The fourth will be the United States.

Prince Bernhard

Bernhard of Lippe-Biesterfeld, the husband of the Queen of The Netherlands, is correctly titled the Prince of The Netherlands. It is technically incorrect to speak of him as the Prince Consort or as Prince Bernhard.

He was born June 29, 1911, in Jena, Germany and was brought up in the rural atmosphere of an East German estate.

Both of his parents were great sport lovers and especially fine horsemen. He received his first riding lesson at the age of three.

Bernilo, as he was called by his family, took his early schooling under the extremely severe discipline in the German "gymnasiums." He attended the University of Lausanne, Switzerland, and studied law at the Universities of Munich and Berlin. Joining the chemical firm of I. G. Farben, he was sent to Paris and in June, 1936, was made assistant manager of its local branch office.

Assuming the nationality of his wife upon his marriage to the then Princess Juliana, he spent the first three years of marriage familiarizing himself with that country.

When war broke out in 1940, the Prince spent much time on the roof of the Royal Palace behind a machine gun in anti-aircraft defense. When, on orders of the government, he took his family to England, he returned to the Continent immediately after seeing his family safely established on British soil.

He stayed on the Continent until the impending defeat of France. Returning to England, he learned to fly, and was soon appointed Chief Netherlands Liaison Officer with the British Army, Navy and Air Force, and later also became Chief of The Netherlands Mission to the War Office. During the war he made several trips, several times to visit his family in Canada, to the United States, and to the war fronts in North Africa and Normandy, where a Dutch brigade was landed.

In September, 1944, he was appointed Supreme Commander of the Netherlands Armed Forces, including the underground forces in occupied Holland, but excluding the Navy. From his headquarters in Belgium and later in southern Holland, he played a vital part in the operations leading to the liberation of The Netherlands.

The Prince's present responsibilities include that of Inspector-General of the Army, Air Force and Navy; chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and member of the Council for Military Affairs of the Realm, the Defense Council, Air Force Council, Council of the Admiralty and the Army Council.

He is a member of the board of directors of four large institutions: the Utrecht Industries Fair, the Royal Blast Furnaces at Ijmuiden, the Royal Dutch Airlines, and the Netherlands Bank for National Recovery.

In 1950 he was sent as goodwill ambassador on a trip to Venezuela, Brazil and Mexico. In 1951 he went on a similar trip to Uruguay, Argentina and Chile.

The Prince is founder and a director of the Prince Bernhard Fund, which has as its aim the advancement of arts and sciences in The Netherlands. At its annual drives for contributions, white carnations—the Prince's favorite flower—are sold.

Shown here are Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands, who will visit Kingston on Saturday, April 5. It is expected that the queen in an informal address will stress the strong bond of kinship existing between The Netherlands and Kingston, which was founded as a Dutch colony 300 years ago. The visit of the queen and the prince will mark the first outstanding event in the tercentenary celebration. Other important events are scheduled for the remainder of the year, with special emphasis during the Summer months.

Powers of the Queen Include Authority to Make, Enforce Laws

Kingstonians, looking forward to the scheduled visit of the Queen of The Netherlands, may wonder just what are the powers of a queen today.

The following article has been prepared by the Netherlands Information Service to answer that question.

According to the Constitution, the ruling monarch of The Netherlands may be either a King or a Queen. Since 1890, The Netherlands has been ruled by a woman: the first was Queen Wilhelmina, who was succeeded in 1948 by her daughter, Queen Juliana.

The Crown, as the monarch often is called, may be said to possess but not to exercise power. The Constitution vests it with many powers; in practice, however, the political decisions must be those of responsible ministers. . . .

Royal rule through ministerial puppets is prevented by the article of the Constitution which says "The King is inviolable; the ministers are responsible."

The ministers are solely responsible (to Parliament) for all actions of the Crown, which means, in its practical application, that the ministers are responsible for their own actions. If the Crown were to command the execution or the obstruction of a certain action, it could assert its will only if it were able to find a minister willing to assume that responsibility. Should it find such a man, he would have to gain the support of Parliament for his actions. This issue between the Crown and Parliament was decided in the latter's favor in 1868, when Parliament twice refused to allocate funds for the government, which, in that case, was backed by King William III, Queen Juliana's grandfather.

The following powers, conditioned by the operation of ministerial responsibility, as expressed by the requirement of a ministerial counter signature, are vested in the Crown by the Netherlands Constitution:

Authority to enforce laws, including authority to make regulations.

Command of the armed forces.

Power of appointment and removal.

Conduct of foreign relations.

Power of initiative in legislation, shared with the legislature.

Power to approve or disapprove bills.

Power of summoning, adjourning, proroguing and dissolving the Legislature.

Power of pardon.

Although the monarch's powers are strictly regulated, his personal influence is great. "The Crown and its wearer symbolize the unity of the nation," according to R. K. Gooch, in Governments of Continental Europe, a book published by MacMillan in 1942 and edited by James T. Shotwell.

Gooch writes, "So far as personal influence in the political sphere is concerned, there exists, in Bagehot's well-known phrasing, 'the right to be consulted, the right to encourage, the right to warn.' . . . In general, it may be said that during the last hundred years and more in . . . the Netherlands, the monarchs have acted with marked prudence and discretion and have contributed to institutional stability through an influence that has been throughout wholesome and effective."

Hotelman Is Held In Prostitution Ring Connection

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—The manager of the Palace Hotel, 132 West 45th street, and two other men were arrested on charges of compulsory prostitution early today.

A spokesman for District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said the arrests followed the questioning of more than 20 persons at Hogan's office through most of the night.

The wife of an elevator operator at the hotel, just off Times Square, was booked on a narcotics charge for alleged possession of two hypodermic needles.

Six persons, including four hotel employes, were held as material witnesses.

The roundup developed from the arrest yesterday of a Negro charged with living on the proceeds of prostitution, and the appearance in court of two 17-year-old girls who were held as wayward minors. One of the girls, missing from home, had been found at the hotel, authorities said.

Hogan's spokesman said $10 was added to the rate at the hotel if a woman was sent to a room.

The Eventful Life of Queen Juliana of The Netherlands

Was Resident of Canada During Nazi Occupation of Her Country—Born in 1909, Inaugurated Queen in 1948

The eventful life of Queen Juliana of The Netherlands, who will visit Kingston on April 5, has spanned two World Wars, a depression, a period of residence in Canada while Nazi Germans occupied her country, and a period of strenuous recovery efforts in her war-torn, starved country.

Her forthcoming visit to Kingston, it is believed, will be the first time in this city's history that it has been visited by a reigning monarch.

Queen Juliana is a member of the House of Orange-Nassau, the founder of which also founded the Dutch nation. It was also in the dynasty of Orange-Nassau that the first Dutch settlers came to this area 300 years ago.

Queen Juliana was born April 30, 1909, daughter of Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands and of Prince Henry of The Netherlands, Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

Her given names were Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina. Juliana, as she was to be called, was the name of the mother of William the Silent, founder of the Dutch nation and founder of the dynasty of Orange-Nassau. The other women for whom she was named were Louise de Coligny, William the Silent's fourth wife; Queen Emma, who was Queen Wilhelmina's mother; Grand Duchess Marie of Mecklenburg, Juliana's other grandmother; and Queen Wilhelmina herself.

First Years of Life

The first years of the life of "Juliaantje," as the Dutch people called her, were no different from those of any other child. Pictures of this period show her in the sandbox, riding a Shetland pony or playing with her dolls. These years were mostly spent at "Het Loo," a palace originally built as a hunting lodge in the eastern part of the country.

In 1914, when World War 1 broke out, The Netherlands succeeded in keeping out of the struggle; but Queen Wilhelmina found it necessary to remain in The Hague, the seat of the government, during the four war years.

Princess Juliana's early education was in a private class led by Miss B. Cohen Stuart, who followed the methods of Jan Ligthart, then Holland's most progressive educator. Her education was much more liberal than that of her mother.

Five foreign languages—French, German, English, Latin and Greek—were taught the young princess in addition to her native Dutch. She also was tutored in history, geography, constitutional law, economics, mathematics and physics. Se took violin lessons for five years, and meanwhile learned to ride a horse and a bicycle, and to skate.

Princess Juliana often accompanied her parents on trips to the various parts of the country, and soon after World War 1 she started taking some of her vacations abroad, in Norway, England and Switzerland. On one of these occasions she was offered the honorary citizenship of Geneva in commemoration of the relations which have always existed between the House of Orange and Geneva, the city of Calvin.

On April 30, 1927, her 18th birthday, Princess Juliana became of age, according to the Contitution, and received her own income, her own household staff and her own palace, the Kneuterdijk Palace, quite near the Royal Palace at The Hague. On June 12 of that year she was made a member of the Dutch Reformed Church in a solemn service conducted by the Rev. Willem L. Welter.

Her coming of age entitled her to assume her first political function: she was installed as a member of the State Council, the queen's highest advisory body. From that year on she always accompanied the queen in the "golden coach" on the third Tuesday in September for the annual opening of Parliament.

Although the monarch's powers are strictly regulated, his personal influence is great. "The Crown and its wearer symbolize the unity of the nation," according to R. K. Gooch, in Governments of Continental Europe, a book published by MacMillan in 1942 and edited by James T. Shotwell.

Gooch writes, "So far as personal influence in the political sphere is concerned, there exists, in Bagehot's well-known phrasing, 'the right to be consulted, the right to encourage, the right to warn.' . . . In general, it may be said that during the last hundred years and more in . . . the Netherlands, the monarchs have acted with marked prudence and discretion and have contributed to institutional stability through an influence that has been throughout wholesome and effective."

Hotelman Is Held In Prostitution Ring Connection

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—The manager of the Palace Hotel, 132 West 45th street, and two other men were arrested on charges of compulsory prostitution early today.

A spokesman for District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said the arrests followed the questioning of more than 20 persons at Hogan's office through most of the night.

The wife of an elevator operator at the hotel, just off Times Square, was booked on a narcotics charge for alleged possession of two hypodermic needles.

Six persons, including four hotel employes, were held as material witnesses.

The roundup developed from the arrest yesterday of a Negro charged with living on the proceeds of prostitution, and the appearance in court of two 17-year-old girls who were held as wayward minors. One of the girls, missing from home, had been found at the hotel, authorities said.

Hogan's spokesman said $10 was added to the rate at the hotel if a woman was sent to a room.

The hotel manager was booked as Max Mansch, 60, of Brooklyn. He is a one-third owner of the Palace.

The Australian Olympic was conducted in many countries last November, with 16 bridge hands in one session and then 16 more a week later. Today's hand is selected from the first set of 16.

West opens the five of clubs, and East takes the queen and ace of clubs, following with a third club. South's jack wins the third round of clubs, of course.

South can now expect to discard his low hearts on dummy's diamonds, so that he can afford to lose one trump trick and still make his contract. Expecting no trouble, he leads a low trump to dummy's king.

West's discard reveals the sad truth about the trumps. There is grave danger that South will lose two trump tricks.

South must abandon trumps at once in order to run the diamonds. On the third and fourth diamonds South discards low hearts. Fortunately, East must follow suit. Dummy next takes the ace of hearts, and now East is down to four trumps and so is South.

A low heart is led from dummy, and East is obliged to ruff with the seven of spades. Does South over-ruff with the jack?

That would lose the contract. No matter how South continued, he would then lose two trump tricks.

South must under-ruff with the four of spades.

Now East must lead from his queen-nine-eight of spades. No matter how he squirms he must yield the last three tricks to declarer.

12 Delegates Are Sure for General

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—A pro-Eisenhower list of 12 Republican National Convention delegate choices for New York county (Manhattan) was announced yesterday. Twelve alternates also were chosen.

The GOP county chairman, Secretary of State Thomas J. Curran, said the selections were made in conferences with Assembly district leaders.

Curran said all those chosen to run in the April 22 primary election would vote for the presidential candidate backed by the New York state GOP organization. The state organization, headed by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, is supporting Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the nomination.

Under New York state law, the GOP delegates go to the convention legally unpledged.

New York state will have 96 votes in the convention.

Some supporters of Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio have claimed he may get as many as 30 of them.

Less for Farmer

The farmer usually gets a little less than half the amount than the city consumer pays for farm products. The remainder goes to handlers, wholesalers and retailers.

Snow and Cold Hits Eastern Areas of U. S.

(By the Associated Press)

Some snow and cold hit areas in the eastern part of the country today as mild weather continued in most of the western states.

No sub-zero cold was reported but temperatures were near zero in northern Maine early today. It was below freezing over most of the Atlantic and coastal states.

Light snow fell in the lower Great Lakes region, parts of western Pennsylvania and in sections of Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas. Falls in parts of the midwest measured from two to four inches.

Temperatures climbed to the 60's as far north as Rapid City, S. D., yesterday. It was 79 in Los Angeles and San Diego.

THE RUMINATOR

By HUMPHREY B. NEILL
A Column of Contrary Opinion

From what I read and hear you are still going to learn of changes and shifts in the defense program. Nothing, apparently, is set. Policies seem to veer with each fresh worry about the economy.

The never-ending debate between those who would like to see all-out mobilization and those who argue for enough butter with the guns to keep everyone happy and prosperous, will continue through 1952, from current indications.

There are two ways to look at this: The guns-and-butter boys believe that a third world war is not imminent. The all-out-for-war group thinks that there is terrific risk in stalling war production.

Inasmuch as the butter-and-guns policy is winning out—with more butter rather than less inferred fom present Washington policies—there is apparently more weight on the side of "no war this year."

Which side will be right in their soberly considered guesses is, of course, the great unknown question.

However, present policies (veering toward more butter) do mean that there is a growing fear of a slump in the civilian goods' industries. And, as you and I know, politicians dread slumps and deflation in an election year. The very thought of anything bordering on the nature of "hard times" and unemployment scares a politician 'most to death.

These swift shifts in policies, nevertheless, might catch the guessers out on a limb. Let's see where things might run counter to plans.

If more raw materials are allotted to manufacturers of consumers' products (including the so-called "durable" goods: automobiles, household appliances, building materials, and the like) —if these material allotments are increased, then few shortages will appear this year. Inasmuch as the public has been fooled before about threatened shortages people are going to be slow to buy things they don't need. In consequence, a renewed buying spree has seemed improbable. If goods are now going to be in relatively free supply, during 1952, consumers will be even more likely to hold off from heavier than usual purchasing. Inflation, therefore becomes less imminent.

It seems to the Ruminator that the shift toward more butter might well add to the possibility of deflation this year. If so, the politicians would be caught in a trap: More consumers' goods would maintain higher employment, but at the same time may prevent prices from rising.

If you want to watch this inflation-deflation tug-of-war I suggest you keep your eye on commodity prices. These are sensitive and reflect the opinions and thinking of thousands of producers as well as of speculators. I cannot show the recent trend of commodity prices in chart form in this space, but you can quickly plot the following figures, if you wish to, and see what has happened in the past year. As of February first, the N. Y. Journal of Commerce index of primary market prices dipped to the lowest level reached by this index since mid-December 1950. From January 1951 to date, the trend has been steadily downward (bearing out, if I may brag, the contrary anti-inflation comments written here so often last year). Here are the monthly figures, if you wish to chart the fourteen months' trend (1927-1929 equals 100 in the Journal of Commerce Index):

January, 1951	196.4
February	203.9
March	201.0
April	201.3
May	200.7
June	199.0
July	195.0
August	194.9
September	195.7
October	196.8
November	196.5
December	195.4
January, 1952	194.0
February	192.9

If the group that sees less probability of war this year proves to be correct in its judgment, commodity prices will be less likely to rise. War is the greatest stimulant to commodities, of course. So you have a very interesting situation ahead. People are saving money and not pushing prices up with their wild purchasing as they did "after Korea" and in January a year ago. Goods are plentiful and will remain so if policies are shifted toward more butter and fewer guns. Finally, renewed warfare may not break out this year (although this, obviously, is an unknown factor).

The election campaigns may influence prices later, but probably not early in the year. Senator Taft's success might be interpreted slightly more "deflationary" than would General Eisenhower's. However, there is little point in paying much attention to the candidates until along toward June. In the meantime it will be largely "talk." Primaries give straws-in-the-wind, but are not conclusive evidence.

Closer to Agreement

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—The bankrupt Third Avenue Transit System moved closer to agreement with the CIO Transport Workers Union last night by indicating there would be no more mass layoffs and by granting pension concessions, a company spokesman announced. Lester T. Doyle, a Third Avenue trustee, said in a statement that the trustees felt they were close to an agreement with the union and called for a meeting with the union Feb. 11. Federal Judge Samuel H. Kaufman stated last Jan. 24 that the company would be liquidated unless the union signed a contract giving the company a free hand in the economy layoffs and rescheduling of the bus service. Judge Kaufman set Feb. 18 as the deadline for consummation of a new contract.

Restaurant Holdup

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Two bandits held up a fashionable lower Fifth avenue restaurant at 2 a. m. today and escaped in a car with $3,450 in cash and jewelry from the cash register and about a dozen bar patrons. Twenty-five diners in the rear were unaware of the holdup in Lilliana's restaurant, 68 Fifth avenue.

One ride and You'll say:

"That's the Smartest Million Dollars BUICK Ever Spent"

WHEN we tell you that every 1952 Buick rides like a million dollars, we're not just slinging slang—we're talking real money—right-on-the-barrelhead cash.

A million dollars and more were poured into research and testing—design and tools—engineering, production and components—to team up the combination of ride features you'll find on a Buick—and on no other car in the world.

A million dollars and more was the price paid to work out control of end-sway and side-roll on curves—to double-check vertical "throw" with shock absorbers and big soft-acting coil springs for all four wheels—to V-brace the torque-tube keel and X-brace the frame—to cushion body and engine—and to silk out the whole operation with Dynaflow Drive.*

You may not care how the job was done, or what it cost. But we'll lay you this:

You're going to say "thanks a million" to Buick engineers once you get this spirited smoothie under your hands and haunches.

Old familiar roads take on a new smoothness. Gone are the weave and wander, the jitter and jounce that you've felt in lesser cars. You ride with road-hugging assurance and level ease.

All of which only begins to tell you what really great cars these 1952 Buicks turned out to be.

Never before have style and stamina—comfort and character—power, performance and price been brought together with such satisfying skill.

The obvious thing for you to do is come in and look them over. How about taking half an hour off to do that—today?

Equipment, accessories, trim and models are subject to change without notice.

The Australian Olympic was conducted in many countries last November, with 16 bridge hands in one session and then 16 more a week later. Today's hand is selected from the first set of 16.

West opens the five of clubs, and East takes the queen and ace of clubs, following with a third club. South's jack wins the third round of clubs, of course.

South can now expect to discard his low hearts on dummy's diamonds, so that he can afford to lose one trump trick and still make his contract. Expecting no trouble, he leads a low trump to dummy's king.

West's discard reveals the sad truth about the trumps. There is grave danger that South will lose two trump tricks.

South must abandon trumps at once in order to run the diamonds. On the third and fourth diamonds South discards low hearts. Fortunately, East must follow suit. Dummy next takes the ace of hearts, and now East is down to four trumps and so is South.

A low heart is led from dummy, and East is obliged to ruff with the seven of spades. Does South over-ruff with the jack?

That would lose the contract. No matter how South continued, he would then lose two trump tricks.

South must under-ruff with the four of spades.

Now East must lead from his queen-nine-eight of spades. No matter how he squirms he must yield the last three tricks to declarer.

(By the Associated Press)

Some snow and cold hit areas in the eastern part of the country today as mild weather continued in most of the western states.

No sub-zero cold was reported but temperatures were near zero in northern Maine early today. It was below freezing over most of the Atlantic and coastal states.

Light snow fell in the lower Great Lakes region, parts of western Pennsylvania and in sections of Wisconsin. Minnesota and the Dakotas. Falls in parts of the midwest measured from two to four inches.

Temperatures climbed to the 60's as far north as Rapid City, S. D., yesterday. It was 79 in Los Angeles and San Diego.

12 Delegates Are Sure for General

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—A pro-Eisenhower list of 12 Republican National Convention delegate choices for New York county (Manhattan) was announced yesterday. Twelve alternates also were chosen.

The GOP county chairman, Secretary of State Thomas J. Curran, said the selections were made in conferences with Assembly district leaders.

Curran said all those chosen to run in the April 22 primary election would vote for the presidential candidate backed by the New York state GOP organization. The state organization, headed by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, is supporting Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the nomination.

New York state will have 96 votes in the convention.

Some supporters of Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio have claimed he may get as many as 30 of them.

By HUMPHREY B. NEILL

A Column of Contrary Opinion

From what I read and hear you are still going to learn of changes and shifts in the defense program. Nothing, apparently, is set. Policies seem to veer with each fresh worry about the economy.

The never-ending debate between those who would like to see all-out mobilization and those who argue for enough butter with the guns to keep everyone happy and prosperous, will continue through 1952, from current indications.

There are two ways to look at this: The guns-and-butter boys believe that a third world war is not imminent. The all-out-for-war group thinks that there is terrific risk in stalling war production.

Inasmuch as the butter-and-guns policy is winning out—with more butter rather than less inferred fom present Washington policies—there is apparently more weight on the side of "no war this year."

Which side will be right in their soberly considered guesses is, of course, the great unknown question.

However, present policies (veering toward more butter) do mean that there is a growing fear of a slump in the civilian goods' industries. And, as you and I know, politicians dread slumps and deflation in an election year. The very thought of anything bordering on the nature of "hard times" and unemployment scares a politician 'most to death.

These swift shifts in policies, nevertheless, might catch the guessers out on a limb. Let's see where things might run counter to plans.

If more raw materials are allotted to manufacturers of consumers' products (including the so-called "durable" goods: automobiles, household appliances, building materials, and the like) —if these material allotments are increased, then few shortages will appear this year. Inasmuch as the public has been fooled before about threatened shortages people are going to be slow to buy things they don't need. In consequence, a renewed buying spree has seemed improbable. If goods are now going to be in relatively free supply, during 1952, consumers will be even more likely to hold off from heavier than usual purchasing. Inflation, therefore becomes less imminent.

It seems to the Ruminator that the shift toward more butter might well add to the possibility of deflation this year. If so, the politicians would be caught in a trap: More consumers' goods would maintain higher employment, but at the same time may prevent prices from rising.

If you want to watch this inflation-deflation tug-of-war I suggest you keep your eye on commodity prices. These are sensitive and reflect the opinions and thinking of thousands of producers as well as of speculators. I cannot show the recent trend of commodity prices in chart form in this space, but you can quickly plot the following figures, if you wish to, and see what has happened in the past year. As of February first, the N. Y. Journal of Commerce index of primary market prices dipped to the lowest level reached by this index since mid-December 1950. From January 1951 to date, the trend has been steadily downward (bearing out, if I may brag, the contrary anti-inflation comments written here so often last year). Here are the monthly figures, if you wish to chart the fourteen months' trend (1927-1929 equals 100 in the Journal of Commerce Index):

January, 1951	196.4
February	203.9
March	201.0
April	201.3
May	200.7
June	199.0
July	195.0
August	194.9
September	195.7
October	196.8
November	196.5
December	195.4
January, 1952	194.0
February	192.9

If the group that sees less probability of war this year proves to be correct in its judgment, commodity prices will be less likely to rise. War is the greatest stimulant to commodities, of course. So you have a very interesting situation ahead. People are saving money and not pushing prices up with their wild purchasing as they did "after Korea" and in January a year ago. Goods are plentiful and will remain so if policies are shifted toward more butter and fewer guns. Finally, renewed warfare may not break out this year (although this, obviously, is an unknown factor).

The election campaigns may influence prices later, but probably not early in the year. Senator Taft's success might be interpreted slightly more "deflationary" than would General Eisenhower's. However, there is little point in paying much attention to the candidates until along toward June. In the meantime it will be largely "talk." Primaries give straws-in-the-wind, but are not conclusive evidence.

Closer to Agreement

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—The bankrupt Third Avenue Transit System moved closer to agreement with the CIO Transport Workers Union last night by indicating there would be no more mass layoffs and by granting pension concessions, a company spokesman announced. Lester T. Doyle, a Third Avenue trustee, said in a statement that the trustees felt they were close to an agreement with the union and called for a meeting with the union Feb. 11. Federal Judge Samuel H. Kaufman stated last Jan. 24 that the company would be liquidated unless the union signed a contract giving the company a free hand in the economy layoffs and rescheduling of the bus service. Judge Kaufman set Feb. 18 as the deadline for consummation of a new contract.

Restaurant Holdup

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Two bandits held up a fashionable lower Fifth avenue restaurant at 2 a. m. today and escaped in a car with $3,450 in cash and jewelry from the cash register and about a dozen bar patrons. Twenty-five diners in the rear were unaware of the holdup in Lilliana's restaurant, 68 Fifth avenue.

One ride and You'll say:

"That's the Smartest Million Dollars BUICK Ever Spent"

WHEN we tell you that every 1952 Buick rides like a million dollars, we're not just slinging slang—we're talking real money—right-on-the-barrelhead cash.

A million dollars and more were poured into research and testing—design and tools—engineering, production and components—to team up the combination of ride features you'll find on a Buick—and on no other car in the world.

A million dollars and more was the price paid to work out control of end-sway and side-roll on curves—to double-check vertical "throw" with shock absorbers and big soft-acting coil springs for all four wheels—to V-brace the torque-tube keel and X-brace the frame—to cushion body and engine—and to silk out the whole operation with Dynaflow Drive.*

You may not care how the job was done, or what it cost. But we'll lay you this:

You're going to say "thanks a million" to Buick engineers once you get this spirited smoothie under your hands and haunches.

Old familiar roads take on a new smoothness. Gone are the weave and wander, the jitter and jounce that you've felt in lesser cars. You ride with road-hugging assurance and level ease.

Never before have style and stamina—comfort and character—power, performance and price been brought together with such satisfying skill.

The obvious thing for you to do is come in and look them over. How about taking half an hour off to do that—today?

Equipment, accessories, trim and models are subject to change without notice.

Audio-Visual Uses Told to Adult Group

Audio-visual education is as ancient as civilization itself, said Warren A. Russell, director of audio-visual education within the local school system, speaking before the Adult Education Group, at its regular weekly meeting Monday evening in the Kingston High School library.

The earliest teachers of man illuminated their oral teachings by drawing pictures in the sand, Mr. Russell said. Thus, audio-visual aids have ever accompanied education throughout the centuries. Because of this constant alliance, the name audio-visual education implies a separate department within education and is a misnomer, he continued. We should consider this phase of learning as audio-visual aids to education, since it is not a method in itself but a series of aids to be used in any department. It does not compete with teaching in other departments but supplements it.

Common Aids

Audio-visual aids common to the elementary schools include blackboards, globes, maps, pictures, film strips, motion pictures, records, recorders, radio, television and field trips. Foremost in general interest appeal to all children is the motion picture.

Time is a vital factor in the regular classroom program; often prohibiting a long term project such as watching the complete life history of a plant in science. The condensed 12 minute film alleviates this situation by presenting to the child a vivid and concise picture of the desired project. Class discussion and re-showing of the film increase the child's knowledge.

Communication failure between teacher and pupil is a common cause of misunderstanding and of consequent difficulties in learning, observed Mr. Russell. Motion pictures positively guarantee each child in the classroom a common experience background following the showing of a particular film. This tends to break down the threat of a communication failure.

Film Strip

The film strip is a great educational tool, said Mr. Russell. The strip consists of a series of transparent pictures which are projected upon a screen. Pupil discussion and oral explanation by the teacher as each picture is shown clarify and emphasize the desired information.

The use of radio and television in the elementary schools is dependent upon the content of the broadcast, remarked Mr. Russell. News and speeches of nation-wide interest should be available to pupils by means of radio. Wide use of the radio and television in the schools is curtailed to a large extent by lack of sufficient funds.

Equipment

Concluding his talk, Mr. Russell briefly outlined the development of audio-visual education in Kingston during the past three years under his direction. He stated that the department has maintained a steady progress since its origin and that the Kingston public school system now owns 17 motion picture projectors, 70 motion picture films, 20 film strip projectors, 500 film strips, and 10 opaque projectors.

Mrs. Frieda Dingee, principal of School 7, presided as chairman for the evening.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of ice blue slipper satin fashioned with square neckline, illusion yoke and molded bodice trimmed with tiny beads. Her full skirt terminated in a cathedral train. Her three-quarter length illusion veil was attached to a cloche of ice blue satin edged with rhinestones and two small pearl clips. She carried a white orchid on a prayer book.

Mrs. John McGowan, Jr., 72 Foxhall avenue was her sister's matron of honor. With her gown of Arcady blue velveteen and net styled with a molded bodice and long skirt, she wore a fitted velveteen jacket and carried a matching muff with a corsage of white roses and silver streamers. Her headpiece was a flower-covered white cloche.

State Grange Deputy Denounces Oleo Bill Cites Cost Increase

During an official visit to Ulster Grange 969 in Ulster Park Wendesday night, Vernon A. Barnhart of Stone Ridge, deputy state master, denounced the passage of a bill now pending in the state Legislature to permit the sale of colored oleomargarine in New York state as unfair to consumer and farmer alike. He cited the increase in the price of oleo in practically all states, except those bordering New York, where the colored margarine product is sold.

"Should this bill be passed," he perdicted, the price will increase in this state just as it has in others where there is but little difference between its cost and that of butter.

Deputy Barnhart said the national Grange had registered its disapproval of any change in the status of oleomargarine with respect to its being colored and urged the members of Ulster Grange to add their protests through communications to their representatives in Albany.

Among the many objections advanced, the speaker said there was every reason to believe that the present cheap spread, if colored, would in all likelihood be much more expensive and asked, "what guarantee has the public that unscrupulous individuals will not offer it as butter?" He said the consumer had much more to lose than the farmer by the passage of the pending bill and added that he doubted very much whether sufficient butter could be produced in this country now for its entire population.

Benefits Manufacturers

Reviewing the history of the product, the speaker said "In 1885 the Supreme court ruled that oleo should be put on the market in its natural color. The chief function of oleo is to give a cheap spread to those who desire it. With this in mind, the state and national Granges favored and worked for the repeal of extreme federal taxes placed upon the product and finally gained the removal of these taxes to the extent of 10 to 12 cents per pound. Contrary to the purpose intended, however," Mr. Barnhart advised, "it was the manufacturer and not the consumer who benefited through this reduction. The same thing, I have no doubt would be true again should the colored margarine be permitted. The manufacurer will benefit at the consumer's expense."

Quotes Senator Wicks

He questioned the value of an extensive study made at the suggestion of Governor Dewey, and at considerable expense, whereby representatives were sent to several states away from the New York border to check colored oleo prices in many cities. "When the research was concluded," said Mr. Barnhart, "Governor Dewey expressed himself as favoring the bill to permit the colored product, but "according to Senator Wicks, the price of butter and oleo in the cities visited only varied about 20 cents per pound."

Involves Labor

"The soap manufacturers are the largest producers of oleomargarine," the deputy said. "Lever Brothers are working strenuously for this approval. They own islands in the South Pacific where they can get labor for two or three cents per hour. How can American labor hope to compete with that situation? That should be reason enough to satisfy anyone and to assure the consumer that he will be the loser."

He had some comments to make about the Department of Agriculture and recalled that it had originally been devised upon recommendations of the national Grange. He remarked about the unfavorable aspects of many laws affecting farmers today and in particular, those associated with the Brannen law.

Enlightens Consumer

Mr. Barnhart also called attention to certain forms of promotion being sponsored by the Grange and the GLF to enlighten the consumer on prices to farmers versus those paid by the public. As a case in point, he said farmers receive an average of nine cents for a quart of milk while the consumer pays 24 cents; apples are purchased for three cents per pound from the farmer but the consumer pays a good deal more than that amount.

A discussion had by the members following Mr. Barnhardt's address concluded with the adoption of a resolution by Ulster Grange to support the national Grange in its efforts to prevent any change in the present bill affecting oleomargarine.

Mrs. Isaac Graham, juvenile state Grange deputy, was also present for her official visit and outlined the goals of that department for the year.

During the business meeting with Harold V. Story, presiding as Master, reports from various committees were heard. Edward McBroom, chairman, reported that the recent card party held in Port Ewen showed net proceeds of $66.40, and expressed his appreciation to his committee and others who assisted him in the project.

Following the meeting, Mrs. Alfred Schoonmaker, acting lecturer, was assisted by Donald Herring in presenting an unusual and entertaining radio skit in which the members participated. One of the highlights of the program came when George Hard and A. Loren LeFevre, attired in the conventional chef's costumes, prepared and baked cakes under Mrs. Schoonmaker's supervision.

MAKING LETTER PERSONAL

In referring to office practice, the following question would be quite normal, but concerning a private house, it is very strange indeed: "Is it wrong to write 'personal' on the envelope of a very personal letter to a member of a large family? I have received such letters and no one in my family has taken offense. But the mother of the girl I sent such a letter to is insulted. Since I didn't know the others in the family very well, I thought it quite all right because I know that in many families letters sent to one are considered family property."

It seems impossible that anyone could think of opening a letter addressed to any other member of the family. In other words, there should be no necessity for putting "personal" on an envelope. In fact, I wonder if anyone who would think of reading another's letter would be deterred by the word "personal."

Reason for Refusing Invitation

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it necessary to explain the reason for having to refuse an invitation?

Answer: To a very intimate friend you would say, "I'm sorry, but I am lunching with Mary," or "We are going to the Joneses." To someone you know only slightly, you say regretfully, "I'm so sorry, I have another engagement."

If Decorative—Yes

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it in bad taste to have empty vases displayed in the living room?

Answer: Ordinary flower containers should be kept in the closet until filled with flowers. But vases that have decorative value of their own are used with or without flowers.

How Many Guests

Dear Mrs. Post: What is your opinion of using paper plates and napkins at a wedding anniversary celebration?

Answer: Of course linen napkins and china or glass plates are to be preferred, but when a sufficient number of these would be out of the question, the substitution of paper items is acceptable.

Captain Straley Will Attend Workshop at Walter Reed Hospital

Captain Rose V. Straley, daughter of Louis M. Straley Sr., 70 Stephan street, Kingston, New York, and a member of the Army Nurse Corps, will leave Fort Bragg, N. C., shortly for a tour of duty at the Walter Reed Army Medical School in Washington, D. C.

The captain, who is presently stationed at the U. S. Army Hospital, Fort Bragg, N. C., will attend an eight-day course at the Workshop for Army Nurse Corps officers, to be held at Walter Reed Hospital, beginning Saturday, Feb. 16.

Captain Straley first entered the Nurse Corps in April 1942 and served at several hospitals throughout the United States. Among them were Pine Camp, N. Y., and Fort Bragg, N. C.

During World War 2, the captain served with the 32nd station hospital in North Africa and the 16th Evacuation hospital in Italy. She is authorized to wear the Victory Medal, Presidential Unit Citation, American Theatre Medal and the European African Middle Eastern Campaign Medal with five Bronze Campaign Stars.

Captain Straley was born in Weehawken, N. J., but later moved to Kingston, N. Y., and graduated from the Kingston High School in 1938. She then entered the Kingston Hospital as a student nurse. Upon finishing her nurse's training the captain entered the Army Nurse Corps and remained there until the conclusion of World War 2.

The captain then entered New York University at the end of the war and graduated in June 1949 with a bachelor of science degree in nursing. In April 1951 she again entered the service and has remained on duty at the U. S. Army Hospital, Fort Bragg, since that time. For relaxation the captain likes to play tennis.

Sculptor Attends New Paltz Preview

Chaim Gross Reveals Methods to Large Group at New Paltz

"I choose a subject to fit the piece of wood," Chaim Gross, one of America's foremost sculptors, told a large enthusiastic audience Sunday at the opening of an exhibit of his work at the State Teachers College at New Paltz. The exhibition will continue until Sunday, Feb. 24.

Gross explained that after obtaining a block of wood, he examined it carefully, checked the grain and then chose the subject from among his sketches.

On exhibit in the Student Union building of the college, Gross's work includes figures in woods such as vermillion, cocabola, beefwood and lignum vitae as well as in bronze, marble and alabaster; and semi-hard woods like mahogany and walnut which he recommends for beginners in wood sculpture.

Lignum vitae, for example, comes from a tree that grows in South American swamps where water has a high mineral content. The minerals absorbed by the tree in its growth result in a wood almost as hard as stone, predominantly dark with light streaks.

The swiftness and absorbed intensity characterizing the artist's work was revealed in a film showing his complete execution of a piece of sculpture from the original sketch to the polished, completed figure in his studio in Greenwich village.

The exhibit at the college includes eleven sketches by Gross which were praised by viewers for their boldness and deft execution. Gross had an exhibit of his water colors in January at the Associated American Artists Gallery in New York.

Steps Taken

Blocking out and drawing a rough sketch on the sides of the wood block are his first steps. After chipping the wood into form with rough and smooth chisels, he rasps the surface with an assortment of files. Then he uses a metal scraper to achieve a smooth finish and coats the figure with a thin white shellac which raises the grain of the wood. He polishes the surface with steel wool, coats it with melted wax, then polishes the wax. Since no stain is used, the natural beauty and grain of the wood is an important element of the finished work.

Gross is currently working on a circus totem commissioned by a Pennsylvania museum which will include four figures and will be another example of his unique "flat" sculpture like the figure entitled Vanity exhibited here. He is using a three inch thick, ten foot tall board for the work.

Prolific Worker

An exteremely prolific worker, Gross has over 200 pieces of sculpture in museums and private collections and about 100 pieces in his studio at 63 E. 9th street in Greenwich Village. There he holds open house every Saturday afternoon to accommodate a steady stream of visitors that would otherwise infringe on his work periods.

As is often true with gifted persons, Gross is proudest of a smaller accomplishment; his ability to cut his own hair and the fact that he hasn't visited a barber in 22 years. He clips his mass of thick hair almost as he would sculpt a statue, and with the same speed and precision.

A frequent visitor in this area, Gross has spent several summers with Raphael Soyer, a Woodstock painter. The exhibit will be open to the public for the next three weeks.

Audio-Visual Uses Told to Adult Group

Audio-visual education is as ancient as civilization itself, said Warren A. Russell, director of audio-visual education within the local school system, speaking before the Adult Education Group, at its regular weekly meeting Monday evening in the Kingston High School library.

The earliest teachers of man illuminated their oral teachings by drawing pictures in the sand, Mr. Russell said. Thus, audio-visual aids have ever accompanied education throughout the centuries. Because of this constant alliance, the name audio-visual education implies a separate department within education and is a misnomer, he continued. We should consider this phase of learning as audio-visual aids to education, since it is not a method in itself but a series of aids to be used in any department. It does not compete with teaching in other departments but supplements it.

Common Aids

Audio-visual aids common to the elementary schools include blackboards, globes, maps, pictures, film strips, motion pictures, records, recorders, radio, television and field trips. Foremost in general interest appeal to all children is the motion picture.

Time is a vital factor in the regular classroom program; often prohibiting a long term project such as watching the complete life history of a plant in science. The condensed 12 minute film alleviates this situation by presenting to the child a vivid and concise picture of the desired project. Class discussion and re-showing of the film increase the child's knowledge.

Communication failure between teacher and pupil is a common cause of misunderstanding and of consequent difficulties in learning, observed Mr. Russell. Motion pictures positively guarantee each child in the classroom a common experience background following the showing of a particular film. This tends to break down the threat of a communication failure.

Film Strip

The film strip is a great educational tool, said Mr. Russell. The strip consists of a series of transparent pictures which are projected upon a screen. Pupil discussion and oral explanation by the teacher as each picture is shown clarify and emphasize the desired information.

The use of radio and television in the elementary schools is dependent upon the content of the broadcast, remarked Mr. Russell. News and speeches of nation-wide interest should be available to pupils by means of radio. Wide use of the radio and television in the schools is curtailed to a large extent by lack of sufficient funds.

Equipment

Concluding his talk, Mr. Russell briefly outlined the development of audio-visual education in Kingston during the past three years under his direction. He stated that the department has maintained a steady progress since its origin and that the Kingston public school system now owns 17 motion picture projectors, 70 motion picture films, 20 film strip projectors, 500 film strips, and 10 opaque projectors.

Mrs. Frieda Dingee, principal of School 7, presided as chairman for the evening.

MRS. NICHOLAS TRESALONI

Miss Joan Lucille Cole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Cole, 385 Delaware avenue, was married to Nicholas John Tresaloni, 40 St. Mary's street, Sunday at 2:30 p. m. in the Immaculate Conception Church. The Rev. John Depkiewicz of New York City, officiated at the double ring ceremony. The Rev. Martin Schwalbenberg, also of New York city, attended as a guest. A reception for 140 guests followed at the Tropical Inn, Port Ewen, with music by Joe Vigna and his trio.

Miss Theresa Gehringer, organist, played traditional music and accompanied Miss Barbara Bruck, soloist, in her selections, Ave Maria and Veni Creator. White gladioli and palms were used to decorate the church.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of ice blue slipper satin fashioned with square neckline, illusion yoke and molded bodice trimmed with tiny beads. Her full skirt terminated in a cathedral train. Her three-quarter length illusion veil was attached to a cloche of ice blue satin edged with rhinestones and two small pearl clips. She carried a white orchid on a prayer book.

Mrs. John McGowan, Jr., 72 Foxhall avenue was her sister's matron of honor. With her gown of Arcady blue velveteen and net styled with a molded bodice and long skirt, she wore a fitted velveteen jacket and carried a matching muff with a corsage of white roses and silver streamers. Her headpiece was a flower-covered white cloche.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Marilyn Brophy, 89 Third avenue; Joan Sharp, 71 Greenkill avenue; and Patricia Sepesy, 4 Larch street. Their gowns in cerulean blue were styled similar to the honor attendant's. They wore matching velveteen capes, pink flower cloches, and carried corsages of pink roses on velveteen muffs.

John Tresaloni, of East Kingston, was his brother's best man. The ushers were John Murphy, 20 St. Mary's street; Robert Snyder of Hurley, and Daniel Schrader, 174 Hasbrouck avenue.

Upon their return from a trip to New York city, the couple will reside at 385 Delaware avenue. For traveling, the bride chose a blue checked suit with tweed coat, black accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Mrs. Tresaloni, a graduate of Kingston High School, class of '49, is employed by Bull Markets Inc.

State Grange Deputy Denounces Oleo Bill Cites Cost Increase

During an official visit to Ulster Grange 969 in Ulster Park Wendesday night, Vernon A. Barnhart of Stone Ridge, deputy state master, denounced the passage of a bill now pending in the state Legislature to permit the sale of colored oleomargarine in New York state as unfair to consumer and farmer alike. He cited the increase in the price of oleo in practically all states, except those bordering New York, where the colored margarine product is sold.

"Should this bill be passed," he perdicted, the price will increase in this state just as it has in others where there is but little difference between its cost and that of butter.

Deputy Barnhart said the national Grange had registered its disapproval of any change in the status of oleomargarine with respect to its being colored and urged the members of Ulster Grange to add their protests through communications to their representatives in Albany.

Among the many objections advanced, the speaker said there was every reason to believe that the present cheap spread, if colored, would in all likelihood be much more expensive and asked, "what guarantee has the public that unscrupulous individuals will not offer it as butter?" He said the consumer had much more to lose than the farmer by the passage of the pending bill and added that he doubted very much whether sufficient butter could be produced in this country now for its entire population.

Benefits Manufacturers

Reviewing the history of the product, the speaker said "In 1885 the Supreme court ruled that oleo should be put on the market in its natural color. The chief function of oleo is to give a cheap spread to those who desire it. With this in mind, the state and national Granges favored and worked for the repeal of extreme federal taxes placed upon the product and finally gained the removal of these taxes to the extent of 10 to 12 cents per pound. Contrary to the purpose intended, however," Mr. Barnhart advised, "it was the manufacturer and not the consumer who benefited through this reduction. The same thing, I have no doubt would be true again should the colored margarine be permitted. The manufacurer will benefit at the consumer's expense."

Quotes Senator Wicks

He questioned the value of an extensive study made at the suggestion of Governor Dewey, and at considerable expense, whereby representatives were sent to several states away from the New York border to check colored oleo prices in many cities. "When the research was concluded," said Mr. Barnhart, "Governor Dewey expressed himself as favoring the bill to permit the colored product, but "according to Senator Wicks, the price of butter and oleo in the cities visited only varied about 20 cents per pound."

Involves Labor

"The soap manufacturers are the largest producers of oleomargarine," the deputy said. "Lever Brothers are working strenuously for this approval. They own islands in the South Pacific where they can get labor for two or three cents per hour. How can American labor hope to compete with that situation? That should be reason enough to satisfy anyone and to assure the consumer that he will be the loser."

He had some comments to make about the Department of Agriculture and recalled that it had originally been devised upon recommendations of the national Grange. He remarked about the unfavorable aspects of many laws affecting farmers today and in particular, those associated with the Brannen law.

Enlightens Consumer

Mr. Barnhart also called attention to certain forms of promotion being sponsored by the Grange and the GLF to enlighten the consumer on prices to farmers versus those paid by the public. As a case in point, he said farmers receive an average of nine cents for a quart of milk while the consumer pays 24 cents; apples are purchased for three cents per pound from the farmer but the consumer pays a good deal more than that amount.

A discussion had by the members following Mr. Barnhardt's address concluded with the adoption of a resolution by Ulster Grange to support the national Grange in its efforts to prevent any change in the present bill affecting oleomargarine.

Mrs. Isaac Graham, juvenile state Grange deputy, was also present for her official visit and outlined the goals of that department for the year.

During the business meeting with Harold V. Story, presiding as Master, reports from various committees were heard. Edward McBroom, chairman, reported that the recent card party held in Port Ewen showed net proceeds of $66.40, and expressed his appreciation to his committee and others who assisted him in the project.

Following the meeting, Mrs. Alfred Schoonmaker, acting lecturer, was assisted by Donald Herring in presenting an unusual and entertaining radio skit in which the members participated. One of the highlights of the program came when George Hard and A. Loren LeFevre, attired in the conventional chef's costumes, prepared and baked cakes under Mrs. Schoonmaker's supervision.

MAKING LETTER PERSONAL

In referring to office practice, the following question would be quite normal, but concerning a private house, it is very strange indeed: "Is it wrong to write 'personal' on the envelope of a very personal letter to a member of a large family? I have received such letters and no one in my family has taken offense. But the mother of the girl I sent such a letter to is insulted. Since I didn't know the others in the family very well, I thought it quite all right because I know that in many families letters sent to one are considered family property."

It seems impossible that anyone could think of opening a letter addressed to any other member of the family. In other words, there should be no necessity for putting "personal" on an envelope. In fact, I wonder if anyone who would think of reading another's letter would be deterred by the word "personal."

Reason for Refusing Invitation

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it necessary to explain the reason for having to refuse an invitation?

Answer: To a very intimate friend you would say, "I'm sorry, but I am lunching with Mary," or "We are going to the Joneses." To someone you know only slightly, you say regretfully, "I'm so sorry, I have another engagement."

If Decorative—Yes

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it in bad taste to have empty vases displayed in the living room?

Answer: Ordinary flower containers should be kept in the closet until filled with flowers. But vases that have decorative value of their own are used with or without flowers.

How Many Guests

Dear Mrs. Post: What is your opinion of using paper plates and napkins at a wedding anniversary celebration?

Answer: Of course linen napkins and china or glass plates are to be preferred, but when a sufficient number of these would be out of the question, the substitution of paper items is acceptable.

Remember letters are word pictures of you and should be written with the greatest of care. Mrs. Post is sorry she cannot answer personal mail. Captain Straley Will Attend Workshop at Walter Reed Hospital

Captain Rose V. Straley, daughter of Louis M. Straley Sr., 70 Stephan street, Kingston, New York, and a member of the Army Nurse Corps, will leave Fort Bragg, N. C., shortly for a tour of duty at the Walter Reed Army Medical School in Washington, D. C.

The captain, who is presently stationed at the U. S. Army Hospital, Fort Bragg, N. C., will attend an eight-day course at the Workshop for Army Nurse Corps officers, to be held at Walter Reed Hospital, beginning Saturday, Feb. 16.

Captain Straley first entered the Nurse Corps in April 1942 and served at several hospitals throughout the United States. Among them were Pine Camp, N. Y., and Fort Bragg, N. C.

During World War 2, the captain served with the 32nd station hospital in North Africa and the 16th Evacuation hospital in Italy. She is authorized to wear the Victory Medal, Presidential Unit Citation, American Theatre Medal and the European African Middle Eastern Campaign Medal with five Bronze Campaign Stars.

Captain Straley was born in Weehawken, N. J., but later moved to Kingston, N. Y., and graduated from the Kingston High School in 1938. She then entered the Kingston Hospital as a student nurse. Upon finishing her nurse's training the captain entered the Army Nurse Corps and remained there until the conclusion of World War 2.

The captain then entered New York University at the end of the war and graduated in June 1949 with a bachelor of science degree in nursing. In April 1951 she again entered the service and has remained on duty at the U. S. Army Hospital, Fort Bragg, since that time. For relaxation the captain likes to play tennis.

Sculptor Attends New Paltz Preview

Chaim Gross Reveals Methods to Large Group at New Paltz

"I choose a subject to fit the piece of wood," Chaim Gross, one of America's foremost sculptors, told a large enthusiastic audience Sunday at the opening of an exhibit of his work at the State Teachers College at New Paltz. The exhibition will continue until Sunday, Feb. 24.

Gross explained that after obtaining a block of wood, he examined it carefully, checked the grain and then chose the subject from among his sketches.

On exhibit in the Student Union building of the college, Gross's work includes figures in woods such as vermillion, cocabola, beefwood and lignum vitae as well as in bronze, marble and alabaster; and semi-hard woods like mahogany and walnut which he recommends for beginners in wood sculpture.

Lignum vitae, for example, comes from a tree that grows in South American swamps where water has a high mineral content. The minerals absorbed by the tree in its growth result in a wood almost as hard as stone, predominantly dark with light streaks.

The swiftness and absorbed intensity characterizing the artist's work was revealed in a film showing his complete execution of a piece of sculpture from the original sketch to the polished, completed figure in his studio in Greenwich village.

The exhibit at the college includes eleven sketches by Gross which were praised by viewers for their boldness and deft execution. Gross had an exhibit of his water colors in January at the Associated American Artists Gallery in New York.

Steps Taken

Blocking out and drawing a rough sketch on the sides of the wood block are his first steps. After chipping the wood into form with rough and smooth chisels, he rasps the surface with an assortment of files. Then he uses a metal scraper to achieve a smooth finish and coats the figure with a thin white shellac which raises the grain of the wood. He polishes the surface with steel wool, coats it with melted wax, then polishes the wax. Since no stain is used, the natural beauty and grain of the wood is an important element of the finished work.

Gross is currently working on a circus totem commissioned by a Pennsylvania museum which will include four figures and will be another example of his unique "flat" sculpture like the figure entitled Vanity exhibited here. He is using a three inch thick, ten foot tall board for the work.

Prolific Worker

An exteremely prolific worker, Gross has over 200 pieces of sculpture in museums and private collections and about 100 pieces in his studio at 63 E. 9th street in Greenwich Village. There he holds open house every Saturday afternoon to accommodate a steady stream of visitors that would otherwise infringe on his work periods.

NEW PALTZ

Registration Topic For Women Voters

New Paltz, Feb. 8—Permanent personal registration for New York state, an issue which has been actively supported by the League of Women Voters since 1938, will be a chief topic of discussion at the first unit meetings of the group in February.

Permanent personal registration would eliminate the necessity of re-registration each year by the voter in cities of over 5,000 population, regardless of whether he had voted or not in the last election.

A quiz to test their knowledge of the legislation was given to members of the discussion groups at their meetings Thursday at the home of Mrs. John Jacobsen. The quiz will be given again Feb. 13 at 9:30 a. m. at the home of Mrs. Willard Hogan.

Questions such as these will be asked: How far has PRR progressed toward becoming part of our election system? Why is annual registration so expensive? How does permanent registration keep a voter from voting twice from different addresses?

Mrs. Katherine Jacobson reminds all members that Feb. 10 will be the last day to inform her of their intention to attend the legislative conference in Albany. She also announces that the finance drive, directed by Mrs. Fred Miner and Mrs. Rodney Jones, has been completed.

Warns of Abuses

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 8 (AP)—Governor John Lodge today asked the Public Utilities Commission to see to it that natural gas transmission companies do not "abuse" farm property in laying pipelines. In a letter to Commissioner Eugene S. Loughlin, the governor said there have been reports of alleged damage to farm land in New York state, "both field and woodland, by carelessness in the laying of gas pipes." "I feel that we in Connecticut," Lodge stated, "should be ready to deal with any possible occurrence of this kind as the pipeline moves through our farming district."

Plan to Honor First President of Board

Move to perpetuate the memory of the late Marius Schoonmaker, first president of the Kingston board of education, and a very prominent local citizen and historian, has been started. This would take the form of naming the auditorium in the Washington school after this former influential citizen.

The matter was presented to the board of education by Superintendent of Schools Arthur J. Laidlaw Thursday evening.

Laidlaw said some recognition of Schoonmaker should be taken in connection with the school to perpetuate his memory. In erecting the school Marius street, named for Mr. Schoonmaker, has been taken as a part of the school property and closed to traffic. In considering the name for the school that of Marius Schoonmaker was advanced and was considered.

The proposal will be given further study by the board.

Pledges Loyalty

London, Feb. 8 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill broadcast a pledge of loyalty to Britain's new Queen last night and praised as a model monarch the late George VI. Most of his broadcast, heard over much of the world was an emotion-filled eulogy to the dead ruler, his close friend, who he said had walked fearlessly with death. But the veteran statesman whose career began in the reign of Victoria said in closing that he felt a thrill "in evoking once more the prayer and the anthem, 'God Save the Queen.'" Churchill linked the coming reign with the greatness of the first Elizabethan era of four centuries ago and said the sovereignty of the new Queen Bess "will command the loyalty of her native land and of all other parts of the British Commonwealth and Empire."

Wins Approval

Paris, Feb. 8 (AP)—The three-week-old government of Premier Edgar Faure won a slim 292-275 vote of confidence early today in the National Assembly. The issue, a procedural one, was whether the Parliament should consider at once the premier's proposal for a guaranteed wage scaled to the cost of living. The Assembly voted to take up the issue. But the narrow margin meant the test on the bill itself, probably this weekend, would be critical.

'Revolt Against Truman'

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—With whoops and yells of "we like Ike," a thousand Texans roared (that's the word for it) into town today for an Eisenhower-for-President Rally tonight. A 46-piece band from Abilene blared as the visitors, waving banners and Confederate flags, swarmed off a special train at Pennsylvania Station. The flags, said W. H. Francis, of Houston, area symbol of "the revolt against Truman in Texas."

Dutch Consul Says

national histories, languages, they have political and economic differences and often separate and conflicting interests.

Realize Unity Needed

Yet in Europe, he said, and especially in Holland, there is awareness of the need for a closer association in order to present a common front, "but we are circumspect, not because of a reluctance to surrender our national sovereignty," but because of the feeling there should be no haste.

A European army plan, he said, "is acceptable to us" primarily for what it would mean in the unity of North Atlantic nations. Holland, he said, attaches great importance to a western or Atlantic Nations world. It would not risk anything at the expense of this world.

To preserve this, he said, Holland is doing its best, and there is "no more elegant proof of this," than the nation's recent move to double expenditures for defense. "In Korea," he stressed, "men from The Netherlands are fighting with American boys to resist aggression."

Holland, said the baron, was "among the first friends of your republic," and among the few nations ever to give a loan to the United States. There was a slight "parting of the ways" after the early days, he said, "but we have always known that if the worst came to the worst, each could count upon the other for assistance."

During the last world war, he said, "your country was there with spiritual and material weight."

Brighter Future

"But it is a mistake to think and talk too much about the past," he said. "It is better to know that we are headed for a common future. . . . In World War 2 both our destinies were joined, and I do not think they will diverge again."

The baron stressed the common interest of the United States and Holland which "both signed the charter of the United Nations," and mentioned the common "frustrating experiences" with Russia after the war, which made necessary "an agreement among freedom-loving nations to build up a situation of strength." This, he said "embraces both your country and mine."

The permanency of this agreement comes of an interdependence, and it may prove to be indispensible to a free world.

Holland's "initial apprehension" concerning the European army plan, he said, was that it might tend to weaken rather than strengthen Europe, and Holland attached greater importance to its ties with the western world, America, Canada and Great Britain.

Condtions Are Better

In his report on the "state of things" in Holland, the baron told of the appreciation of your "well known Marshall plan help." This aid was considerable, he said, and production in the nation is now roughly 50 per cent higher, and the country is now to the point of exporting more than it is importing. This was encouraging, he said, and the monetary reserve is at a post-war peak.

This, he stressed, could not have been achieved without the general assistance of the United States. However, he said, it might not have been accomplished either "had not the Netherlands been a thrifty housekeeper." In the past year, he said, deflation was "more characteristic of our finances" than inflation.

Played Netherlands Anthem

In opening his talk the baron thanked Toastmaster Harry Rigby, Jr., for his "far too gracious words," and for the playing of the Netherlands National Anthem. His visit to the city, he said, made him feel that he was among "fellow countrymen."

"I feel as though I have sinned against good taste in driving up here," he said. "I should have come in a 17th century barge bringing with me a greeting from Governor Stuyvesant in New Amsterdam to the people of Wiltwyck."

Toastmaster Rigby, reminded the audience, that this event and others during the year would be in keeping with the city's observance of its 300th anniversary.

Mayor Newkirk, after welcoming the baron, thanked all who worked in preparation for the banquet, and advised that if "we stay ever faithful to the Chamber of Commerce, Kingston will be a better place in which to live."

Says Sites Lacking

Lawrence J. MacAvery, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said that the question of bringing industry to the city "always hits hard in every way," and he stressed that the city is limited "as far as sites are concerned."

If the city cannot expand within, it must seek space on the outside, he said. He told of an engineering firm ready to extend help to an industry that would locate here, and said a group of Kingston business men is interested in acquiring a site. From 20,00 to 50,000 sqare feet of floor space is needed "but we just don't have it." The Chamber of Commerce is always interested in solving these problems, and the position of the community is stronger than it has been in many years, he said.

Answered Questions

Toastmaster Rigby allowed time for the audience to ask the baron questions and it was revealed then that His Royal Highness, the Prince of the Netherlands Bernhard, prince concert, is not expect to be with the queen during her visit here, and also that the queen is expected to visit West Point. It also revealed that the baron had become a father only last week and was anxious to get back to New York.

Piano selections at the banquet were by Sam Scudder.

Besides MacAvery, the president, the other Chamber of Commerce officers seated on the dais were: Henry Singer, Joseph F. Deegan and George W. Schneider, vice-president, Chester A. Baltz, Jr., treasurer, and Albert Kurdt, executive secretary.

Votes Aid to Slavia

Paris, Feb. 8 (AP)—With only the Communists dissenting, the French National Assembly today voted 5½ billion francs (about $15,700,000) in aid to Yugoslavia. The vote was 517 to 101, with the non-Communist deputies about as near to unanimity as they ever get. The money represents the 12 per cent share of France in the contribution to help Marshal Tito's government pay for imports. Britain and the U. S. are furnishing the balance.

Mrs. J. D. Schoonmaker for the Auditorium committee stated that the committee and the Building committee would meet shortly to study the problem of fixing rates for rental of the Washington School facilities, including the auditorium.

A contract for shelves and hooks for the three kindergarten rooms at the Washington school was approved at a cost of $264. J. A. Cassidy & Sons were awarded the contract.

No Decision on Brick

The problem of whether to face the new field house on the high school grounds with Hudson river common brick at a cost of $6,950 or to face it with yellow face brick to match the high school and vocational school buildings at a cost of $14,000 for all four sides or $3,500 for only the front facing the high school, was moved over to the next meeting.

The board authorized the city engineer to proceed with a survey at the Washington school to establish grades for the parking and play area so that work could be started early in the spring.

The board accepted with thanks pictures of George Washington which have been given by Stanley Dempsey and James F. Loughran. They will be placed in the Washington school.

Resignation of the junior stenographer employed in Dr. Northway's office was received and accepted as of January 25.

Prayer Report Approved

The report of the committee recently named to make a study of the type of prayer to be used at the opening of school sessions, was received. That committee was Mr. Gumaer, Mr. Ratcliff, Mr. Finerty, Mr. Hyatt, Mr. Boyd, Mr. Martin and Miss Northway. The committee reported that elementary schools use such prayer and the one suggested by the Board of Regents or some other appropriate prayer which has been in use, and that for secondary schools the prayer suggested by the Board of Regents be used at appropriate school assemblies following the the giving of the pledge of allegiance to the flag. The report was approved by the board.

A communication from the State Education department stated a quarterly payment of the public money amounting to $167,700 had been forwarded to the county treasurer. This is the amount of Local Assistance Fund proceeds after the retirement deduction based on the school year 1950-51.

A report of the school census showed a total of 7733 individuals between the age of birth and 18 years of age on January 31, 1952. This is an increase of 312 in the past six months and a decrease of 218 for a net increase of 94, which indicates a continued growth in school population. Since August through December there were 1184 changes made in the census. This is the number of persons either coming into the district, moving out or being transferred from one school district to another or coming in from private schools.

A final report on the amount of state aid for the year showed $886,000. In the budget the board had estimated a revenue of $874,000.

Thus far in the school cafeteria system since the opening of schools 55,228 "A" lunches have been served and 67,966 "C" lunches.

Popularity of the cafeteria in the Washington school is indicated by the daily attendance. Approximately 350 are using the facilities each day. It was stated the equipment for the kitchen at the school was to be delivered in two weeks and would be installed in three weeks. It had been expected that because of priority requirements this equipment would not be received until late spring but better priority has been secured and the equipment is now on the assembly line.

Gym equipment for the school will be shipped on February 18. The gym will be ready for equipment in about a week and will shortly be placed in use. The lockers will not be installed before June. Office equipment will be here about March first. A public opening of the school is planned when the work is completed.

In March a "quantity food preparation" demonstration will be conducted by the state at the Washington school. Kingston has been selected for this demonstration because of the modern equipment available.

A bond of $5,000 was approved guaranteeing the floors in the Washington school against defects for a period of three years after acceptance.

The board then adjourned after receiving the superintendent's report.

The Communist party organ said the Germans are blackmailing other west European countries with the aim of either obtaining full agreement to their own conditions for going into a European army or else—with U. S. backing—to blow up totally the plan for a united army and form instead a big independent West German army.

NEW PALTZ

Registration Topic For Women Voters

New Paltz, Feb. 8—Permanent personal registration for New York state, an issue which has been actively supported by the League of Women Voters since 1938, will be a chief topic of discussion at the first unit meetings of the group in February.

Permanent personal registration would eliminate the necessity of re-registration each year by the voter in cities of over 5,000 population, regardless of whether he had voted or not in the last election.

A quiz to test their knowledge of the legislation was given to members of the discussion groups at their meetings Thursday at the home of Mrs. John Jacobsen. The quiz will be given again Feb. 13 at 9:30 a. m. at the home of Mrs. Willard Hogan.

Questions such as these will be asked: How far has PRR progressed toward becoming part of our election system? Why is annual registration so expensive? How does permanent registration keep a voter from voting twice from different addresses?

Mrs. Katherine Jacobson reminds all members that Feb. 10 will be the last day to inform her of their intention to attend the legislative conference in Albany. She also announces that the finance drive, directed by Mrs. Fred Miner and Mrs. Rodney Jones, has been completed.

Home Mission Needs Discussed by WSCS

New Paltz, Feb. 8—Home mission needs were discussed at a meeting of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church at the home of Mrs. Francis Sullivan on Wednesday night.

Mrs. William Jay and Mrs. Alvin Beatty reviewed the books, Missions to America, and Now for the members. The talks stressed the need for mission services that exists in slums, migrant communities, housing projects and other areas in this country that aren't reached by churches.

A skit entitled, the Nominating Committee Reports, under the direction of Mrs. Walter Dyer, was staged for the members.

Hostesses were Mrs. Ernest Ahlberg, Mrs. Russell Bollen and Mrs. Francis Sullivan.

Warns of Abuses

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 8 (AP)—Governor John Lodge today asked the Public Utilities Commission to see to it that natural gas transmission companies do not "abuse" farm property in laying pipelines. In a letter to Commissioner Eugene S. Loughlin, the governor said there have been reports of alleged damage to farm land in New York state, "both field and woodland, by carelessness in the laying of gas pipes." "I feel that we in Connecticut," Lodge stated, "should be ready to deal with any possible occurrence of this kind as the pipeline moves through our farming district."

Plan to Honor First President of Board

Move to perpetuate the memory of the late Marius Schoonmaker, first president of the Kingston board of education, and a very prominent local citizen and historian, has been started. This would take the form of naming the auditorium in the Washington school after this former influential citizen.

The matter was presented to the board of education by Superintendent of Schools Arthur J. Laidlaw Thursday evening.

Laidlaw said some recognition of Schoonmaker should be taken in connection with the school to perpetuate his memory. In erecting the school Marius street, named for Mr. Schoonmaker, has been taken as a part of the school property and closed to traffic. In considering the name for the school that of Marius Schoonmaker was advanced and was considered.

The proposal will be given further study by the board.

Pledges Loyalty

London, Feb. 8 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill broadcast a pledge of loyalty to Britain's new Queen last night and praised as a model monarch the late George VI. Most of his broadcast, heard over much of the world was an emotion-filled eulogy to the dead ruler, his close friend, who he said had walked fearlessly with death. But the veteran statesman whose career began in the reign of Victoria said in closing that he felt a thrill "in evoking once more the prayer and the anthem, 'God Save the Queen.'" Churchill linked the coming reign with the greatness of the first Elizabethan era of four centuries ago and said the sovereignty of the new Queen Bess "will command the loyalty of her native land and of all other parts of the British Commonwealth and Empire."

Railroad Advice

A representative of the Railroad Retirement Board will be at the examiner's room, second floor, New York Central Railroad Station in Kingston next Wednesday from 1 to 4 p. m. for the purpose of rendering assistance and advice to railroad workers in connection with matters concerning applications for retirement, death benefits and answering any inquiries in connection with the Railroad Retirement and Railroad Unemployment Insurance Acts.

Wins Approval

Paris, Feb. 8 (AP)—The three-week-old government of Premier Edgar Faure won a slim 292-275 vote of confidence early today in the National Assembly. The issue, a procedural one, was whether the Parliament should consider at once the premier's proposal for a guaranteed wage scaled to the cost of living. The Assembly voted to take up the issue. But the narrow margin meant the test on the bill itself, probably this weekend, would be critical.

'Revolt Against Truman'

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—With whoops and yells of "we like Ike," a thousand Texans roared (that's the word for it) into town today for an Eisenhower-for-President Rally tonight. A 46-piece band from Abilene blared as the visitors, waving banners and Confederate flags, swarmed off a special train at Pennsylvania Station. The flags, said W. H. Francis, of Houston, area symbol of "the revolt against Truman in Texas."

Dutch Consul Says

Realize Unity Needed

Yet in Europe, he said, and especially in Holland, there is awareness of the need for a closer association in order to present a common front, "but we are circumspect, not because of a reluctance to surrender our national sovereignty," but because of the feeling there should be no haste.

A European army plan, he said, "is acceptable to us" primarily for what it would mean in the unity of North Atlantic nations. Holland, he said, attaches great importance to a western or Atlantic Nations world. It would not risk anything at the expense of this world.

To preserve this, he said, Holland is doing its best, and there is "no more elegant proof of this," than the nation's recent move to double expenditures for defense. "In Korea," he stressed, "men from The Netherlands are fighting with American boys to resist aggression."

Holland, said the baron, was "among the first friends of your republic," and among the few nations ever to give a loan to the United States. There was a slight "parting of the ways" after the early days, he said, "but we have always known that if the worst came to the worst, each could count upon the other for assistance."

During the last world war, he said, "your country was there with spiritual and material weight."

Brighter Future

"But it is a mistake to think and talk too much about the past," he said. "It is better to know that we are headed for a common future. . . . In World War 2 both our destinies were joined, and I do not think they will diverge again."

The baron stressed the common interest of the United States and Holland which "both signed the charter of the United Nations," and mentioned the common "frustrating experiences" with Russia after the war, which made necessary "an agreement among freedom-loving nations to build up a situation of strength." This, he said "embraces both your country and mine."

The permanency of this agreement comes of an interdependence, and it may prove to be indispensible to a free world.

Holland's "initial apprehension" concerning the European army plan, he said, was that it might tend to weaken rather than strengthen Europe, and Holland attached greater importance to its ties with the western world, America, Canada and Great Britain.

Condtions Are Better

In his report on the "state of things" in Holland, the baron told of the appreciation of your "well known Marshall plan help." This aid was considerable, he said, and production in the nation is now roughly 50 per cent higher, and the country is now to the point of exporting more than it is importing. This was encouraging, he said, and the monetary reserve is at a post-war peak.

This, he stressed, could not have been achieved without the general assistance of the United States. However, he said, it might not have been accomplished either "had not the Netherlands been a thrifty housekeeper." In the past year, he said, deflation was "more characteristic of our finances" than inflation.

Played Netherlands Anthem

In opening his talk the baron thanked Toastmaster Harry Rigby, Jr., for his "far too gracious words," and for the playing of the Netherlands National Anthem. His visit to the city, he said, made him feel that he was among "fellow countrymen."

"I feel as though I have sinned against good taste in driving up here," he said. "I should have come in a 17th century barge bringing with me a greeting from Governor Stuyvesant in New Amsterdam to the people of Wiltwyck."

Toastmaster Rigby, reminded the audience, that this event and others during the year would be in keeping with the city's observance of its 300th anniversary.

Mayor Newkirk, after welcoming the baron, thanked all who worked in preparation for the banquet, and advised that if "we stay ever faithful to the Chamber of Commerce, Kingston will be a better place in which to live."

Says Sites Lacking

Lawrence J. MacAvery, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said that the question of bringing industry to the city "always hits hard in every way," and he stressed that the city is limited "as far as sites are concerned."

If the city cannot expand within, it must seek space on the outside, he said. He told of an engineering firm ready to extend help to an industry that would locate here, and said a group of Kingston business men is interested in acquiring a site. From 20,00 to 50,000 sqare feet of floor space is needed "but we just don't have it." The Chamber of Commerce is always interested in solving these problems, and the position of the community is stronger than it has been in many years, he said.

Answered Questions

Toastmaster Rigby allowed time for the audience to ask the baron questions and it was revealed then that His Royal Highness, the Prince of the Netherlands Bernhard, prince concert, is not expect to be with the queen during her visit here, and also that the queen is expected to visit West Point. It also revealed that the baron had become a father only last week and was anxious to get back to New York.

Piano selections at the banquet were by Sam Scudder.

Besides MacAvery, the president, the other Chamber of Commerce officers seated on the dais were: Henry Singer, Joseph F. Deegan and George W. Schneider, vice-president, Chester A. Baltz, Jr., treasurer, and Albert Kurdt, executive secretary.

Votes Aid to Slavia

Paris, Feb. 8 (AP)—With only the Communists dissenting, the French National Assembly today voted 5½ billion francs (about $15,700,000) in aid to Yugoslavia. The vote was 517 to 101, with the non-Communist deputies about as near to unanimity as they ever get. The money represents the 12 per cent share of France in the contribution to help Marshal Tito's government pay for imports. Britain and the U. S. are furnishing the balance.

Mrs. J. D. Schoonmaker for the Auditorium committee stated that the committee and the Building committee would meet shortly to study the problem of fixing rates for rental of the Washington School facilities, including the auditorium.

A contract for shelves and hooks for the three kindergarten rooms at the Washington school was approved at a cost of $264. J. A. Cassidy & Sons were awarded the contract.

No Decision on Brick

The problem of whether to face the new field house on the high school grounds with Hudson river common brick at a cost of $6,950 or to face it with yellow face brick to match the high school and vocational school buildings at a cost of $14,000 for all four sides or $3,500 for only the front facing the high school, was moved over to the next meeting.

The board authorized the city engineer to proceed with a survey at the Washington school to establish grades for the parking and play area so that work could be started early in the spring.

The board accepted with thanks pictures of George Washington which have been given by Stanley Dempsey and James F. Loughran. They will be placed in the Washington school.

Prayer Report Approved

The report of the committee recently named to make a study of the type of prayer to be used at the opening of school sessions, was received. That committee was Mr. Gumaer, Mr. Ratcliff, Mr. Finerty, Mr. Hyatt, Mr. Boyd, Mr. Martin and Miss Northway. The committee reported that elementary schools use such prayer and the one suggested by the Board of Regents or some other appropriate prayer which has been in use, and that for secondary schools the prayer suggested by the Board of Regents be used at appropriate school assemblies following the the giving of the pledge of allegiance to the flag. The report was approved by the board.

A communication from the State Education department stated a quarterly payment of the public money amounting to $167,700 had been forwarded to the county treasurer. This is the amount of Local Assistance Fund proceeds after the retirement deduction based on the school year 1950-51.

A report of the school census showed a total of 7733 individuals between the age of birth and 18 years of age on January 31, 1952. This is an increase of 312 in the past six months and a decrease of 218 for a net increase of 94, which indicates a continued growth in school population. Since August through December there were 1184 changes made in the census. This is the number of persons either coming into the district, moving out or being transferred from one school district to another or coming in from private schools.

A final report on the amount of state aid for the year showed $886,000. In the budget the board had estimated a revenue of $874,000.

Thus far in the school cafeteria system since the opening of schools 55,228 "A" lunches have been served and 67,966 "C" lunches.

Popularity of the cafeteria in the Washington school is indicated by the daily attendance. Approximately 350 are using the facilities each day. It was stated the equipment for the kitchen at the school was to be delivered in two weeks and would be installed in three weeks. It had been expected that because of priority requirements this equipment would not be received until late spring but better priority has been secured and the equipment is now on the assembly line.

Gym equipment for the school will be shipped on February 18. The gym will be ready for equipment in about a week and will shortly be placed in use. The lockers will not be installed before June. Office equipment will be here about March first. A public opening of the school is planned when the work is completed.

In March a "quantity food preparation" demonstration will be conducted by the state at the Washington school. Kingston has been selected for this demonstration because of the modern equipment available.

A bond of $5,000 was approved guaranteeing the floors in the Washington school against defects for a period of three years after acceptance.

The board then adjourned after receiving the superintendent's report.

Reds Accuse Germans

Moscow, Feb. 8 (AP)—Pravda said today that German militarists have begun an underhanded political attack on their western neighbors. The Communist party organ said the Germans are blackmailing other west European countries with the aim of either obtaining full agreement to their own conditions for going into a European army or else—with U. S. backing—to blow up totally the plan for a united army and form instead a big independent West German army.

Larry Weishaupt fired a 732 on alleys 9 and 10 at the Bowlodrome last night to set a new individual triple record for the Ferraro Major League.

En route to the new standard, the Blonde Buster reeled off solos of 218, 235 and 279. He tossed nine strikes in a row in the third game before he ran into a 10-pin tap. His 732 eclipses the former record of 721 held by Ken Joseph.

Sixteen keglers rolled into the "600" class and there were several high singles in the scoring spree.

Joe Bosco Rolls 650

A 236-224-650 effort gave Jumpin' Joe Bosco a mere seventh in the nightly ratings and Chris Robinson came up with 234-207-634. Hammerin' Hank Kemmerer "slumped" to 213-227-630 on alleys 7 and 8, while Frank "Tarz" Spada hit for 243-627 and Phil Corrado tied the score with 202-241-627.

FIRST "DOUBLE PINOCHLE" WOMAN

So far as is known, Mrs. Kay Roosa, above, wife of Alton Roosa, is the first woman bowler ever to convert the "Big Four" or "double pinochle" split in sanctioned play in Kingston. In case you don't know, the setup includes the 4-6-7-10 pins. Mrs. Roosa, a new starlet in local bowling, achieved the rare trick during her singles competition last weekend at the Central Recreation Alleys. (Freeman Photo)

High School Five At Port Jervis

Port is "up" for this one, having repulsed Middletown, 59-55, in a major upset on Tuesday. Unbeaten at home, Coach G. Warren Kias will try to snap their road jinx that has cost them three defeats.

NOT LIKE HE USED TO DO

Jim Thorpe, the great Indian athlete tries to kick a field goal in snow covered Harvard Stadium at Cambridge, Mass. Not one of the 20 or so kicks he tried carried as far as the goal line. On Nov. 11, 1911, Thorpe playing for the Carlisle Indians, kicked four goals to beat Harvard 18 to 15. One in each period, they measured 15, 22, 34 and 48 yards. (AP Wirephoto)

KHSAA Speaker

FLOYD B. SCHWARTZWALDER

Syracuse University's head football coach, Floyd "Ben" Schwartzwalder will be the guest speaker at the annual Kingston High School Athletic Association banquet on Saturday, Feb. 16, at the high school gym.

A native of Huntington, West Va., he attended the University of West Virginia where he was a center under Greasy Neale and Ike Rodgers though weighing only 152 pounds. He holds a bachelor's and master's degree from West Virginia.

For the next seven years he successfully taught high school football in West Virginia at Weston, Sisterville and Parkersburg. In 1941, he coached the football team at McKinley High, Canton, Ohio.

He enlisted immediately after the season in the paratroops and jumped three times in combat in the European Theatre. A member of the 82nd Division, he rose to the rank of major. He holds the Silver Star, the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart, in addition to four battle stars and a Presidential Unit Citation.

Upon being separated from service, Ben was named head football coach at Muhlenberg. During his three years there, his elevens won 25 while losing only five contests. His 1946 team defeated St. Bonaventure in the Tobacco Bowl. He has just completed his third season at Syracuse. His all-time collegiate head coaching record is 34 wins, 15 losses.

The KHSAA banquet is open to the public and tickets may be had from any member of the KHSAA or Coach G. Warren Kias.

MacPhail Nixes Plans To Buy Bowie Track

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP)—Larry MacPhail carried back to a New York syndicate today his recommendation that the syndicate abandon the idea of buying Bowie race track.

MacPhail, incensed over the fact that the Maryland State Racing Commission allotted Bowie six days in December declared:

"We're withdrawing."

"I'm not going to attempt to operate in December," he said.

He added that "the decision is not entirely up to me, but I will recommend that we not buy."

He also suggested that the racing commission should be investigated.

A syndicate headed by MacPhail and Donald Lillis, a partner in the New York investment firm of Bear Stearns and Co., had taken an option to buy control of the Bowie track, but the offer was conditional on obtaining favorable dates from the racing commission.

Hudson Valley Relays Set May 10 At New Paltz Central's New Track

600 High School Track Stars Will Compete

The Hudson Valley Relays, formerly the Newburgh Relays, will be held at the new quarter mile track at New Paltz Central High on May 10, it was annnounced today.

For the past several years the Relays, which attract about 90 schools and 600 high school athletes, were held at Newburgh under the sponsorship of Newburgh Free Academy.

The big new quarter mile track at New Paltz was responsible for the shift of the Relays after these many years. It is said to be the finest layout in the area.

Top Sprinters Set

The top 16 sprinters of the area will compete in a 100-yard dash to determine the fastest schoolboy in the Hudson valley. This is a special invitation event and will be the main attraction of the meet.

Coaches of area schools have been asked to submit the names of their best 100-yard dash men. Eliminations will narrow the field down to 16 finalists. The first, second and third place winners will receive trophies.

There will be 36 other events, including relays at 440 yards, 880, the mile and mile and a quarter, with a full card of field events and hurdles.

Prizes For All Winners

For the first time prizes will be offered to all the winners. The school which wins a relay will receive a victory plaque; members of the team will receive additional individual trophies; and members of the second and third teams will receive ribbons. The winners of the individual events will each receive a trophy; second and third place will receive ribbons.

The meet which will be the largest athletic event ever held at New Paltz is backed by the Student Council.

Jack Brereton, track coach at New Paltz Central, will serve as meet director and will be assisted by several working committees. Gordon Pine has offered his services and with Coach Brereton and the student committees are already hard at work to insure success of the relays.

Larry Weishaupt Sets New Ferraro Major League Record With 732

Hits 218, 235, 279 On Alleys 9-10; Kaye's Rap 1111

Normie Niles Pounds 211-266-213-691

Larry Weishaupt fired a 732 on alleys 9 and 10 at the Bowlodrome last night to set a new individual triple record for the Ferraro Major League.

En route to the new standard, the Blonde Buster reeled off solos of 218, 235 and 279. He tossed nine strikes in a row in the third game before he ran into a 10-pin tap. His 732 eclipses the former record of 721 held by Ken Joseph.

Sixteen keglers rolled into the "600" class and there were several high singles in the scoring spree.

Joe Bosco Rolls 650

A 236-224-650 effort gave Jumpin' Joe Bosco a mere seventh in the nightly ratings and Chris Robinson came up with 234-207-634. Hammerin' Hank Kemmerer "slumped" to 213-227-630 on alleys 7 and 8, while Frank "Tarz" Spada hit for 243-627 and Phil Corrado tied the score with 202-241-627.

Other good pinfall was credited to Joe Ruzzo 235-623; Clifton Quick 215-213-619; George Robinson 202-214-617; "Hod" Spaulding 229-609; Cliff Davis 202-209-602.

Relegated to the minor bracket were Charlie Gildersleeve's 202-226-598; Fred Ferraro 202-209-595; Joe Schrowang 248-595; Bill Lawrence 201-212-592; Ad Jones 204-204-589; Randy Kelder 202-235-587; Rube Leventhal 237-586; Buster Ferraro 211-584; Mannie Colao 241-582; Ralph Garafola 202-580; Bill Schabot 204-212-579; Chris Gallo 210-578 and Harold Broskie 225-571.

Kaye Sportwair cracked a 3149 series on games of 1111, 993 and 1045. Elstons rolled 1011; Hymes Shoes 1020; Miron Lumber 1069 and Heisman's 1021.

FIRST "DOUBLE PINOCHLE" WOMAN

So far as is known, Mrs. Kay Roosa, above, wife of Alton Roosa, is the first woman bowler ever to convert the "Big Four" or "double pinochle" split in sanctioned play in Kingston. In case you don't know, the setup includes the 4-6-7-10 pins. Mrs. Roosa, a new starlet in local bowling, achieved the rare trick during her singles competition last weekend at the Central Recreation Alleys. (Freeman Photo)

NOT LIKE HE USED TO DO

Jim Thorpe, the great Indian athlete tries to kick a field goal in snow covered Harvard Stadium at Cambridge, Mass. Not one of the 20 or so kicks he tried carried as far as the goal line. On Nov. 11, 1911, Thorpe playing for the Carlisle Indians, kicked four goals to beat Harvard 18 to 15. One in each period, they measured 15, 22, 34 and 48 yards. (AP Wirephoto)

High School Five At Port Jervis

Port is "up" for this one, having repulsed Middletown, 59-55, in a major upset on Tuesday. Unbeaten at home, Coach G. Warren Kias will try to snap their road jinx that has cost them three defeats.

In other games, Newburgh visits Poughkeepsie; Ellenville is at Beacon; and Middletown travels to Monticello.

FLOYD B. SCHWARTZWALDER

Syracuse University's head football coach, Floyd "Ben" Schwartzwalder will be the guest speaker at the annual Kingston High School Athletic Association banquet on Saturday, Feb. 16, at the high school gym.

A native of Huntington, West Va., he attended the University of West Virginia where he was a center under Greasy Neale and Ike Rodgers though weighing only 152 pounds. He holds a bachelor's and master's degree from West Virginia.

For the next seven years he successfully taught high school football in West Virginia at Weston, Sisterville and Parkersburg. In 1941, he coached the football team at McKinley High, Canton, Ohio.

He holds the Silver Star, the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart, in addition to four battle stars and a Presidential Unit Citation.

Upon being separated from service, Ben was named head football coach at Muhlenberg. During his three years there, his elevens won 25 while losing only five contests. His 1946 team defeated St. Bonaventure in the Tobacco Bowl. He has just completed his third season at Syracuse. His all-time collegiate head coaching record is 34 wins, 15 losses.

The KHSAA banquet is open to the public and tickets may be had from any member of the KHSAA or Coach G. Warren Kias.

MacPhail Nixes Plans To Buy Bowie Track

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP)—Larry MacPhail carried back to a New York syndicate today his recommendation that the syndicate abandon the idea of buying Bowie race track.

MacPhail, incensed over the fact that the Maryland State Racing Commission allotted Bowie six days in December declared:

"We're withdrawing."

"I'm not going to attempt to operate in December," he said.

He added that "the decision is not entirely up to me, but I will recommend that we not buy."

He also suggested that the racing commission should be investigated.

A syndicate headed by MacPhail and Donald Lillis, a partner in the New York investment firm of Bear Stearns and Co., had taken an option to buy control of the Bowie track, but the offer was conditional on obtaining favorable dates from the racing commission.

600 High School Track Stars Will Compete

The Hudson Valley Relays, formerly the Newburgh Relays, will be held at the new quarter mile track at New Paltz Central High on May 10, it was annnounced today.

For the past several years the Relays, which attract about 90 schools and 600 high school athletes, were held at Newburgh under the sponsorship of Newburgh Free Academy.

The big new quarter mile track at New Paltz was responsible for the shift of the Relays after these many years. It is said to be the finest layout in the area.

Top Sprinters Set

The top 16 sprinters of the area will compete in a 100-yard dash to determine the fastest schoolboy in the Hudson valley. This is a special invitation event and will be the main attraction of the meet.

Coaches of area schools have been asked to submit the names of their best 100-yard dash men. Eliminations will narrow the field down to 16 finalists. The first, second and third place winners will receive trophies.

There will be 36 other events, including relays at 440 yards, 880, the mile and mile and a quarter, with a full card of field events and hurdles.

Prizes For All Winners

For the first time prizes will be offered to all the winners. The school which wins a relay will receive a victory plaque; members of the team will receive additional individual trophies; and members of the second and third teams will receive ribbons. The winners of the individual events will each receive a trophy; second and third place will receive ribbons.

The meet which will be the largest athletic event ever held at New Paltz is backed by the Student Council.

Jack Brereton, track coach at New Paltz Central, will serve as meet director and will be assisted by several working committees. Gordon Pine has offered his services and with Coach Brereton and the student committees are already hard at work to insure success of the relays.

Committee chairmen who will work with Coach Brereton are: Revenue, Barbara Misner; publicity, Vivian Schiro; programs, Carolyn Cotton; tickets and donations, James Ashton; refreshments, Olga Martinez; services, George Millham; dressing rooms, Joseph Hofler; track preparation, Walter Paradies; entries—Lorna Lohrman and reception, Pat Will.

FELLER HOPES FOR FOURTH NO-HITTER

Bobby Feller tells Jeff Dittrich, 4, about his ambition to pitch a fourth no-hitter before hanging up his spikes in the major leagues. Lakers Cash In On Yankee Formula

(By The Associated Press)

The Minneapolis Lakers are following a policy made famous by the New York Yankees in their bid for the Western division title of the National Basketball Association.

George Mikan scored 27 points to lead the Lakers to a 86-75 triumph. The victory boosted the Lakers' edge over Rochester to two games.

Jumping Joe Fulks enjoyed a big night as he led the Philadelphia Warriors to an 105-91 victory over the Fort Wayne Pistons.

Fulks netted 36 points. The Pistons led, 30-18 at the end of the first quarter but Fulks started hitting in the second period and the Warriors were ahead at halftime, 50-49. The Warriors opened the gap to 78-67 at the end of third quarter and remained in front for keeps.

Palmer 7-Under In El Paso Open

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 8 (AP)—Johnny Palmer, the Badin, N. C., tournament veteran, for whom the cash register hasn't been ringing much lately, set out at the head of the field in the $10,000 El Paso Open's second 18-hole round today.

Palmer led with a seven-under-par 64 but his position was a trifle shaky even for the first round—which wasn't finished for nine players last night.

Among them was Marty Furgol, Ill., who had a four-under-par when he was forced to quit on the thirteenth green because it was too dark to see what he was doing. He winds up the first round the first thing today and he might catch Palmer on the remaining five holes.

Breathing on Palmer's neck was tall Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn., who had a 65.

Wouldn't You Know It'd Be Like That

Hamilton, Bermuda, Feb. 8 (AP)—"You should have seen the one that got away."

That's what Wilfred J. Higgs is saying today.

The record catch is 13 pounds nine and one-half ounces. The fish measured 32 and one-half inches from tip to tip and had a 17 inch girth.

DeFazio 5-1 Underdog In Madison Square Debut

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Johnny (Red) De Fazio has been fighting preliminary bouts in Madison Square Garden so often that he's practically become a fixture in the big arena. But tonght the chunky Bayonne, N. J., redhead is in the main event.

It doesn't matter to Johnny that he's rated a 3 to 1 underdog against fast-punching Chico Vejar of Stamford, Conn. The energetic Jerseyite gets full network radio and television treatment for his 10 p. m. (EST) scrap.

Donoghue, a 5 to 1 favorite over De Fazio, had been scheduled to meet Vejar. As a result of his triumph, De Fazio replaced Donoghue and will earn a $5,000 purse (including $3,000 radio-TV money) against Vejar.

ANCHORING THE MUSKRAT TRAP.....

EXTRA CHAIN OR WIRE MAY....

...BE NECESSARY TO LENGTHEN THE TRAP CHAIN TO 5 OR 6 FT. A SHORTER CHAIN WOULD PERMIT A MUSKRAT TO SWIM OUT IN THE STREAM AS FAR AS HE COULD AND RETURN TO SHALLOW WATER WITHOUT TIRING ENOUGH TO DROWN BUT A LONG CHAIN CAUSES HIS FAILURE. PICK A FLAT STONE ABOUT 12 IN. LONG, 4 IN. WIDE AND 1 OR 2 IN. THICK. CUT NOTCHES AROUND ITS MIDDLE TO KEEP THE WIRE FROM SLIPPING OFF. AFTER THE TRAP IS SET NEAR SHORE, TOSS THE STONE OUT IN THE STREAM BUT BE SURE THE CHAIN LIES ON THE STREAM'S BOTTOM SO THAT FLOATING DEBRIS CAN'T ENTANGLE IT AND MOVE TRAP.

Await Walcott For Title Talks

Miami, Fla., Feb. 8 (AP)—Talks concerning Jersey Joe Walcott's next heavyweight championship fight have been suspended pending the title-holder's arrival here next week.

Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club (IBC), which has a contract for Walcott to fight former champion Ezzard Charles, has been conferring with Felix Bocchicchio, Walcott's manager, this week but both said yesterday they would not hold any further discussions until Walcott arrives.

Traffic Council Takes Issue on New Highway

Greenwich, Conn., Feb. 8 (AP)—The Fairfield County Traffic Council takes issue today with military authorities who said a proposed inland highway across Connecticut would be of less military importance than a route along the shore.

The Traffic Council, a private organization, is pushing the inland thruway proposal in opposition to plans to relieve traffic congestion by building another highway parallel to U. S. Route No. 1, which follows the shore line.

The military report, saying the latter route was of more strategic importance, was prepared by Major General Frederick Reincke, the state's adjutant general, and concurred in by the army's chief of transportation.

Exceptions to this report were taken yesterday by William J. Anderson of West Hartford, a retired federal highway engineer who has been working with the Fairfield County Traffic Council.

Bequest for School

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—A bequest of $100,000 for erection of two new cottages at Lincoln Hall, the 80-acre Catholic boys' training school in upper Westchester county, was announced last night. Robert L. Hoguet, president of the board for the past 22 years, has reported that the late John J. Fallahee, a board member, had bequeathed to Lincoln Hall "two legacies of $500,000 each for the purpose of building two cottages and also named us his residuary legatee." Hoguet reported the extension of the vocation building at Lincoln Hall, made possible through a grant of $200,000 from the Charles Hayden Foundation, will be completed this summer and will permit instruction in eight different trades as against the present three. Last year, the report shows, 458 boys were cared for and 246 discharged.

Hoover Says His Military Plan Is Widely Endorsed

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover said last night he had received wide endorsement of his proposal for the eventual withdrawals of American ground forces from Europe while the nation centers attention on building strong air and sea power.

"The country should know that men of great experience and high rank from the army, navy and air force have endorsed the proposals of my address of Jan. 27, Mr. Hoover said in a statement.

"I have also received a flood of messages from citizens in all parts of the country," Mr. Hoover added. "Perhaps the most heartwarming are the hand-written letters from a great multitude of American homes."

Endorsements of his stand, he said, came from Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, Lieut Gen. Harold L. George, Maj. Gen. Hugh Knerr and Brig. Gen. Bruce P. D. Disque.

Also endorsing his proposals, he said, were navy Admirals William V. Pratt, William H. Standley and Harry E. Yarnell; also Henry P. Fletcher, William R. Castle, Hugh Gibson, Spruille Braden, Joseph P. Kennedy and Arthur Bliss Lane. All of the latter are former State Department officials or diplomats.

Lakers Cash In On Yankee Formula

(By The Associated Press)

The Minneapolis Lakers are following a policy made famous by the New York Yankees in their bid for the Western division title of the National Basketball Association.

The baseball Yanks won many a pennant by beating their closest rivals when it counted. The Lakers are doing the same thing.

George Mikan scored 27 points to lead the Lakers to a 86-75 triumph. The victory boosted the Lakers' edge over Rochester to two games.

Jumping Joe Fulks enjoyed a big night as he led the Philadelphia Warriors to an 105-91 victory over the Fort Wayne Pistons.

Fulks netted 36 points. The Pistons led, 30-18 at the end of the first quarter but Fulks started hitting in the second period and the Warriors were ahead at halftime, 50-49. The Warriors opened the gap to 78-67 at the end of third quarter and remained in front for keeps.

Palmer 7-Under In El Paso Open

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 8 (AP)—Johnny Palmer, the Badin, N. C., tournament veteran, for whom the cash register hasn't been ringing much lately, set out at the head of the field in the $10,000 El Paso Open's second 18-hole round today.

Palmer led with a seven-under-par 64 but his position was a trifle shaky even for the first round—which wasn't finished for nine players last night.

Among them was Marty Furgol, Ill., who had a four-under-par when he was forced to quit on the thirteenth green because it was too dark to see what he was doing. He winds up the first round the first thing today and he might catch Palmer on the remaining five holes.

Breathing on Palmer's neck was tall Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn., who had a 65.

Wouldn't You Know It'd Be Like That

That's what Wilfred J. Higgs is saying today.

The record catch is 13 pounds nine and one-half ounces. The fish measured 32 and one-half inches from tip to tip and had a 17 inch girth.

DeFazio 5-1 Underdog In Madison Square Debut

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Johnny (Red) De Fazio has been fighting preliminary bouts in Madison Square Garden so often that he's practically become a fixture in the big arena. But tonght the chunky Bayonne, N. J., redhead is in the main event.

It doesn't matter to Johnny that he's rated a 3 to 1 underdog against fast-punching Chico Vejar of Stamford, Conn. The energetic Jerseyite gets full network radio and television treatment for his 10 p. m. (EST) scrap.

Donoghue, a 5 to 1 favorite over De Fazio, had been scheduled to meet Vejar. As a result of his triumph, De Fazio replaced Donoghue and will earn a $5,000 purse (including $3,000 radio-TV money) against Vejar.

ANCHORING THE MUSKRAT TRAP.....

EXTRA CHAIN OR WIRE MAY....

...BE NECESSARY TO LENGTHEN THE TRAP CHAIN TO 5 OR 6 FT. A SHORTER CHAIN WOULD PERMIT A MUSKRAT TO SWIM OUT IN THE STREAM AS FAR AS HE COULD AND RETURN TO SHALLOW WATER WITHOUT TIRING ENOUGH TO DROWN BUT A LONG CHAIN CAUSES HIS FAILURE.

PICK A FLAT STONE ABOUT 12 IN. LONG, 4 IN. WIDE AND 1 OR 2 IN. THICK. CUT NOTCHES AROUND ITS MIDDLE TO KEEP THE WIRE FROM SLIPPING OFF. AFTER THE TRAP IS SET NEAR SHORE, TOSS THE STONE OUT IN THE STREAM BUT BE SURE THE CHAIN LIES ON THE STREAM'S BOTTOM SO THAT FLOATING DEBRIS CAN'T ENTANGLE IT AND MOVE TRAP.

PFC. DONALD HENDRICKSON

CPL. GEORGE N. THORNE

CPL. TORM LARSEN

CPL. RICHARD DE KAY

Four Ulster county men, including two from Kingston, are now serving in overseas posts with the army.

Pfc. Donald F. Henderickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Henderickson, Hurley, is stationed in Taegu, Korea, and is serving with the Korean Military Advisory Group. Pfc. Hendrickson enlisted in the regular army in March, 1951. He took six weeks of basic training at Camp Gordon, Ga., and upon completion of training, attended the South East Signal School at that station from which he graduated as a powerman. He remained at Camp Gordon until October, 1951, when he was ordered overseas to Korea. Pfc. Hendrickson graduated from Kingston High School, 1949.

Cpl. Torm V. Larsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Torm Larsen, 18 Hurley avenue, has been promoted to the grade of corporal after completion of a course of instruction at the quartermaster school in Bavaria, Germany. He received his basic training at Camp Polk, La., and was then transferred to Fort Hood, Tex., where he remained until his assignment overseas. Cpl. Larsen's wife, a music teacher at the Wallkill Central School, now resides at 42 Taylor street, this city. She expects to join her husband this summer. Cpl. Larsen was graduated from Kingston High School, Class of 1947, and attended the New York State Agricultural and Home Economics School at Cobleskill for two years prior to enlisting.

Word has been received by the local U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force Recruiting Station that George N. Thorne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Thorne, Market street, Saugerties, has recently been promoted to the grade of corporal. Cpl. Thorne enlisted in the regular army in April, 1951, and after receiving his basic training at Fort Dix, N. J., embarked for overseas duty to Germany in September, 1951. He is a member of the 18th Ordnance Company. A brother, Jack Thorne of the Marine Corps, recently returned from a tour of duty in Korea and is now stationed in Quantico, Va. Both are graduates of Saugerties High School.

Cpl. Richard H. De Kay, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Herbert De Kay, 272 Manor avenue, has recently been promoted to his present grade while serving in England. Cpl. De Kay enlisted in the air force October, 1950, and received his basic training at the Lackland Air Force Base in Texas. Upon completion of his training, he was transferred to Sandia Base, New Mexico, where he remained until May, 1951, when he was transferred overseas. Cpl. De Kay graduated from Kingston High School in 1947 and attended Allegheny College at Meadville, Pa.

All four enlistments were serviced through the local U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force Recruiting Station.

Await Walcott For Title Talks

Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club (IBC), which has a contract for Walcott to fight former champion Ezzard Charles, has been conferring with Felix Bocchicchio, Walcott's manager, this week but both said yesterday they would not hold any further discussions until Walcott arrives.

Bocchicchio wanted Walcott released from the contract to fight Harry (Kid) Mathews, so he could "make a little dough" out of title.

Traffic Council Takes Issue on New Highway

Greenwich, Conn., Feb. 8 (AP)—The Fairfield County Traffic Council takes issue today with military authorities who said a proposed inland highway across Connecticut would be of less military importance than a route along the shore.

The Traffic Council, a private organization, is pushing the inland thruway proposal in opposition to plans to relieve traffic congestion by building another highway parallel to U. S. Route No. 1, which follows the shore line.

The military report, saying the latter route was of more strategic importance, was prepared by Major General Frederick Reincke, the state's adjutant general, and concurred in by the army's chief of transportation.

Exceptions to this report were taken yesterday by William J. Anderson of West Hartford, a retired federal highway engineer who has been working with the Fairfield County Traffic Council.

Bequest for School

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—A bequest of $100,000 for erection of two new cottages at Lincoln Hall, the 80-acre Catholic boys' training school in upper Westchester county, was announced last night. Robert L. Hoguet, president of the board for the past 22 years, has reported that the late John J. Fallahee, a board member, had bequeathed to Lincoln Hall "two legacies of $500,000 each for the purpose of building two cottages and also named us his residuary legatee." Hoguet reported the extension of the vocation building at Lincoln Hall, made possible through a grant of $200,000 from the Charles Hayden Foundation, will be completed this summer and will permit instruction in eight different trades as against the present three. Last year, the report shows, 458 boys were cared for and 246 discharged.

Hoover Says His Military Plan Is Widely Endorsed

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover said last night he had received wide endorsement of his proposal for the eventual withdrawals of American ground forces from Europe while the nation centers attention on building strong air and sea power.

"The country should know that men of great experience and high rank from the army, navy and air force have endorsed the proposals of my address of Jan. 27, Mr. Hoover said in a statement.

His Jan. 27 proposals were made in a nation-wide radio address.

"I have also received a flood of messages from citizens in all parts of the country," Mr. Hoover added. "Perhaps the most heartwarming are the hand-written letters from a great multitude of American homes."

Mr. Hoover's troop withdrawal proposal excluded American forces needed to protect American air bases outside those nations making up the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Endorsements of his stand, he said, came from Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, Lieut Gen. Harold L. George, Maj. Gen. Hugh Knerr and Brig. Gen. Bruce P. D. Disque.

Also endorsing his proposals, he said, were navy Admirals William V. Pratt, William H. Standley and Harry E. Yarnell; also Henry P. Fletcher, William R. Castle, Hugh Gibson, Spruille Braden, Joseph P. Kennedy and Arthur Bliss Lane. All of the latter are former State Department officials or diplomats.

All of the military men who endorsed the former president's speech are on inactive duty now.

BABSON on BUSINESS

Babson Park, Fla., Feb. 8—I am writing this column after returning from a Foreign Missions' meeting. It has reminded me of the great missionary movements of my youth, which older readers will remember. Unfortunately, our children never experienced and hence will not be interested in what I am about to write.

Those were great days! The country was then stirred up about foreign missions as it is now excited over inflation. We wanted to "save" the heathen of China, India and Africa. Great mass meetings were held when many of my friends dedicated themselves to go to foreign lands to tell of the "Love of Jesus." My Father and Mother were very active in rasing funds to support the missionary cause.

Picking up an old hymn book of my boyhood, I note the songs which we all enthusiastically sang: "From Greenland's Icy Mountains to India's Coral Strand." Another was "Rescue the Perishing, Care for the Dying." Another "Arise, Ye Soldiers of the Cross." Another "Christ for the World We Sing." Then we all would repeat: "Take my life and let it be consecrated, Lord, to Thee; take my hands and let them move—take my lips and let them be filled with messages from Thee,—take my silver and my gold . . . "

What We Now Do

I do not question the present military policy of President Truman. I am not a pacifist—if a mad dog should come into my house, I would shoot it. Probably the world is not yet ready for peace. Perhaps the Korean-Chinese campaign is sound.

It, however, certainly does not make sense to have been teaching the "heathen Chinese" of the Love of God in my youth and then now shooting and bombing these same people, many of whom are graduates of our missionary schools. They certainly must think we Christians are a nation of hypocrites.

What About Point Four?

It is popular for some conservative church people to wildly criticize President Truman. Probably he has been misled and has made many mistakes. His desire, however, to help backward nations surely accords with Bible teachings. All serious church members who believe in foreign missions should endorse Point Four.

We Americans cannot indefinitely "live the life of Riley" with our reckless waste and pleasures while so many of the world's people are starving. Ultimately, either our living standards will be lowered or else we must help other nations raise their living standards. Perhaps the first persecuted race we should help is the displaced Jews of Israel; but first we need a World Truce.

Known by Our Fruits

A professor under whom I once studied at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology would prove that God has given the world new discoveries only as soon as the people were ready for them. This was his interpretation of the old saying, "Necessity is the mother of invention." May this now bring us a World Truce.

I wish that preachers, instead of praying for peace, would pray that we be worthy of peace and be willing to make the necessary sacrifices therefore. Then peace will come naturally, as have other great blessings. The Apostle Paul must have had this in mind when he said: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." (1st Cor. 2:9).

A Final Thought

It certainly seems as if some mistake has been made. Either the leaders of our mission schools did not properly teach the right Gospel, or else we in this country have set such a poor example as to undo all their efforts. Jesus said: "By their fruits ye shall know them." Did He expect this would be applied to our foreign missionaries or to us churchmen here at home who are urging Truman to bomb China?

The eleventh of February is the birthday of Thomas A. Edison for whom I once had the honor of working. When anything which he did failed to give the desired results, he always blamed it on himself—never on the chemicals or other materials with which he was experimenting. He would then try to find the mistake which he had made. I believe in foreign missions and in present day churches, but certainly this Korean-Chinese situation makes me feel that there has been a mistake somewhere. Let us remember Edison and see that it will be corrected, if we hope to have further prosperity and avoid unemployment. We now need a World Truce—not simply a Korean Truce.

As Pegler Sees It

had, for showing an aversion to their gallant Russian allies. Mr. Sulzberger's piece seemed to me to approve the colonel's attempt to suppress the superior judgment of his men and substitute his own stupidity. This is the attitude which led us into the ordeal of the Berlin airlift, the Korean hot war and the European cold war.

Mr. Stone was chilly and I trust that my own demeanor could not be described as fawning. It soon came out that someone had cabled him a report that I had written something unpleasant about him. I said I would not discuss it unless he gave me the text of the offensive matter, but remarked that I had already mentioned the fact that during his residence in Frankfurt he was entitled to the service, free, of eight German civilians as his household servants. I asked him if this were true and he did not answer directly. He said he had actually had only six, not eight, leaving untouched the question whether he had been entitled to eight.

He did not consider his six free servants to have been an unjustified luxury, however, explaining that his earnings here were much less than he would have been getting as assistant to Lester Markel, the Sunday editor of the Times. I tried to get a copy of the official list of the State Department which gives all the salaries but while this is not "classified" or "secret" or "top secret" in the jargon of the cult, there are just enough to go around and I couldn't have one. I have reason to believe however that Mr. Stone's pay is $14,000 a year and to his pay you must add the free rent of a furnished apartment of the first category in the brand new State Department housing "project," tax-exemption on his liquor and cigarettes if any, and a car and chauffeur on request. As a member of McCloy's cabinet he gets a three bedroom apartment. He justified his use of the six Germans as flunkeys without cost to himself on the ground that he took advantage of this relationship to indoctrinate them with American culture. If he is spreading American culture at a financial sacrifice it would seem that he must have drawn more than $25,000 a year which is very good, even on the Times.

I have no formal statement of Mr. Stone's politics other than a boast that he was a fighter against communism and an ardent advocate of "democracy." On these points I have to say that I was fighting Communists individually as well as Nazis as far back as 1935 when the term "Red-Baiter" was much more offensive than the term "Red," that I have never known the Sunday section of the Times as an ally in the fight and that in many years of work as a newspaper reporter in New York I never heard of Shepard Stone.

There are hundreds of vociferous anti-Communists now who had a lot of us fooled back in those days. I am thinking of Eleanor Roosevelt, Drew Pearson, and our own Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, who was described by A. A. Berle, one of his colleagues in the department as one of the pro-Russian group which rejected the solemn, truthful warnings of Whittaker Chambers against Alger Hiss.

The Mature Parent

Overweight Child May Be Short on Home Love

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

"My overweight daughter, 13 years old, is so sensitive about her condition that I cannot get her to discuss it with me. Since I find candy wrappers in her waste basket, I know that she is secretly indulging her craze for sweets, but if I so much as mention diet, I am overwhelmed with tears and reproaches. Should I just stop trying to get her to diet?"

Yes. Until an overweight child is himself ready to control his appetite, pressing him to do so only drives him deeper into himself and tempts him to shut us completely out of his confidence.

It might be helpful if my reader thought of her overweight child as a combat soldier, isolated up front, with his supply lines broken. If we wanted to help him, our first problem would be the reopening of our communication lines with him. Before we can move up reinforcement encouragement and love to our overweight child, lonely and beleaguered by fear and self-dislike, we, too, have to reopen communication lines along which we can dispatch our constant and increasing supplies of reassurance.

The fact that this mother's daughter is hiding her candy-eating from her suggests that she may indeed need emotional reinforcements. If she did not fear her parent's disapproval, she would be eating her candy openly.

Until her fear of disapproval is removed, until she can feel that she can expose her hunger for sweets to her mother without arousing anxiety and reproach, the communication lines between her mother and herself will be blocked.

A DIET OF UNQUESTIONING LOVE

For some time now, the experts have been telling us that obesity is rooted in emotional difficulties, rather than physical onces. Since this knowledge has become more general, the parent of the fat child often suffers as much anxiety as the youngster over his condition. The child's pudginess cannot be hidden or disguised.

There it is, the "insecure" overweight, hinting to relatives and friends that Billy or Ellen are short-changed on home love, mother's "acceptance." If we do not get on to this fear of other people's criticism, our overweight youngster can become a threat to us.

The candy wrappers in the wastebasket will not move us to a rush of compassion for the little boy or girl who believes he must hide his need for comfort—but will be seen merely as new depressing evidence that we are inadequate parents.

Our concern becomes self-defense, not the defense of our child. Our need to justify ourselves may make us resort to all kinds of pressures to force him to release us from our uncomfortable position. We may try to criticize, "shame" or bribe him into self-control.

This is most mistaken of us. Until our overweight child has been fed a consistent, rich diet of unquestioning love over a period of time, we have no more right to expect him to forego his candy than we would have to expect a man on the top rung of a ladder to walk off into space.

As soon as our lonely little fighter with fear and self-dislike feels quietness, support and love in us, instead of anxiety and criticism, he will want to tell us how worried he is. The supply lines are clearing, and as he receives the real comfort he has been seeking, he will lose his craving for the false one. He himself will say, "Would you help me try to diet, mother?"

Wants Peterson

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Newbold Morris said last night he had offered Virgil W. Peterson, operating director of the Chicago Crime Commission, the post of chief counsel in the investigation of governmental corruption charges. In Chicago, Peterson declined comment. A 46-year-old former FBI man, Peterson has been serving since 1952 with the crime commission, a private agency. Morris said he made the offer yesterday and asked for a reply within three days. Morris, an Independent Republican and former president of the New York City Council, was named Attorney General McGrath last Friday to head the governmental probe.

8,431 Measles Cases

Albany, Feb. 8 (AP)—A total of 8,431 cases of measles was reported in upstate New York during January—a record for the month. The State Health Department said the January total compared with 1,586 upstate cases in January, 1951. The health department noted that the heaviest measles incidence usually came during the spring months. In April 1946, there were 15,909 cases reported and in April, 1949, there were 10,553 cases listed.

Rail Delay Record

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Total delays to Long Island Rail Road passenger trains last January amounted to 158 hours and 11 minutes, it was announced today by Chief Operating Officer J. Frank Doolan. The figure compares with 296 hours and 12 minutes in December—a reduction of nearly one-half.

BABSON on BUSINESS

Babson Park, Fla., Feb. 8—I am writing this column after returning from a Foreign Missions' meeting. It has reminded me of the great missionary movements of my youth, which older readers will remember. Unfortunately, our children never experienced and hence will not be interested in what I am about to write.

Those were great days! The country was then stirred up about foreign missions as it is now excited over inflation. We wanted to "save" the heathen of China, India and Africa. Great mass meetings were held when many of my friends dedicated themselves to go to foreign lands to tell of the "Love of Jesus." My Father and Mother were very active in rasing funds to support the missionary cause.

Picking up an old hymn book of my boyhood, I note the songs which we all enthusiastically sang: "From Greenland's Icy Mountains to India's Coral Strand." Another was "Rescue the Perishing, Care for the Dying." Another "Arise, Ye Soldiers of the Cross." Another "Christ for the World We Sing." Then we all would repeat: "Take my life and let it be consecrated, Lord, to Thee; take my hands and let them move—take my lips and let them be filled with messages from Thee,—take my silver and my gold . . ."

What We Now Do

I do not question the present military policy of President Truman. I am not a pacifist—if a mad dog should come into my house, I would shoot it. Probably the world is not yet ready for peace. Perhaps the Korean-Chinese campaign is sound.

It, however, certainly does not make sense to have been teaching the "heathen Chinese" of the Love of God in my youth and then now shooting and bombing these same people, many of whom are graduates of our missionary schools. They certainly must think we Christians are a nation of hypocrites.

What About Point Four?

It is popular for some conservative church people to wildly criticize President Truman. Probably he has been misled and has made many mistakes. His desire, however, to help backward nations surely accords with Bible teachings. All serious church members who believe in foreign missions should endorse Point Four.

We Americans cannot indefinitely "live the life of Riley" with our reckless waste and pleasures while so many of the world's people are starving. Ultimately, either our living standards will be lowered or else we must help other nations raise their living standards. Perhaps the first persecuted race we should help is the displaced Jews of Israel; but first we need a World Truce.

Known by Our Fruits

A professor under whom I once studied at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology would prove that God has given the world new discoveries only as soon as the people were ready for them. This was his interpretation of the old saying, "Necessity is the mother of invention." May this now bring us a World Truce.

I wish that preachers, instead of praying for peace, would pray that we be worthy of peace and be willing to make the necessary sacrifices therefore. Then peace will come naturally, as have other great blessings. The Apostle Paul must have had this in mind when he said: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." (1st Cor. 2:9).

A Final Thought

It certainly seems as if some mistake has been made. Either the leaders of our mission schools did not properly teach the right Gospel, or else we in this country have set such a poor example as to undo all their efforts. Jesus said: "By their fruits ye shall know them." Did He expect this would be applied to our foreign missionaries or to us churchmen here at home who are urging Truman to bomb China?

The eleventh of February is the birthday of Thomas A. Edison for whom I once had the honor of working. When anything which he did failed to give the desired results, he always blamed it on himself—never on the chemicals or other materials with which he was experimenting. He would then try to find the mistake which he had made. I believe in foreign missions and in present day churches, but certainly this Korean-Chinese situation makes me feel that there has been a mistake somewhere. Let us remember Edison and see that it will be corrected, if we hope to have further prosperity and avoid unemployment. We now need a World Truce—not simply a Korean Truce.

As Pegler Sees It

had, for showing an aversion to their gallant Russian allies. Mr. Sulzberger's piece seemed to me to approve the colonel's attempt to suppress the superior judgment of his men and substitute his own stupidity. This is the attitude which led us into the ordeal of the Berlin airlift, the Korean hot war and the European cold war.

Mr. Stone was chilly and I trust that my own demeanor could not be described as fawning. It soon came out that someone had cabled him a report that I had written something unpleasant about him. I said I would not discuss it unless he gave me the text of the offensive matter, but remarked that I had already mentioned the fact that during his residence in Frankfurt he was entitled to the service, free, of eight German civilians as his household servants. I asked him if this were true and he did not answer directly. He said he had actually had only six, not eight, leaving untouched the question whether he had been entitled to eight.

He did not consider his six free servants to have been an unjustified luxury, however, explaining that his earnings here were much less than he would have been getting as assistant to Lester Markel, the Sunday editor of the Times. I tried to get a copy of the official list of the State Department which gives all the salaries but while this is not "classified" or "secret" or "top secret" in the jargon of the cult, there are just enough to go around and I couldn't have one. I have reason to believe however that Mr. Stone's pay is $14,000 a year and to his pay you must add the free rent of a furnished apartment of the first category in the brand new State Department housing "project," tax-exemption on his liquor and cigarettes if any, and a car and chauffeur on request. As a member of McCloy's cabinet he gets a three bedroom apartment. He justified his use of the six Germans as flunkeys without cost to himself on the ground that he took advantage of this relationship to indoctrinate them with American culture. If he is spreading American culture at a financial sacrifice it would seem that he must have drawn more than $25,000 a year which is very good, even on the Times.

I have no formal statement of Mr. Stone's politics other than a boast that he was a fighter against communism and an ardent advocate of "democracy." On these points I have to say that I was fighting Communists individually as well as Nazis as far back as 1935 when the term "Red-Baiter" was much more offensive than the term "Red," that I have never known the Sunday section of the Times as an ally in the fight and that in many years of work as a newspaper reporter in New York I never heard of Shepard Stone.

There are hundreds of vociferous anti-Communists now who had a lot of us fooled back in those days. I am thinking of Eleanor Roosevelt, Drew Pearson, and our own Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, who was described by A. A. Berle, one of his colleagues in the department as one of the pro-Russian group which rejected the solemn, truthful warnings of Whittaker Chambers against Alger Hiss.

The Mature Parent

Overweight Child May Be Short on Home Love

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

"My overweight daughter, 13 years old, is so sensitive about her condition that I cannot get her to discuss it with me. Since I find candy wrappers in her waste basket, I know that she is secretly indulging her craze for sweets, but if I so much as mention diet, I am overwhelmed with tears and reproaches. Should I just stop trying to get her to diet?"

Yes. Until an overweight child is himself ready to control his appetite, pressing him to do so only drives him deeper into himself and tempts him to shut us completely out of his confidence.

It might be helpful if my reader thought of her overweight child as a combat soldier, isolated up front, with his supply lines broken. If we wanted to help him, our first problem would be the reopening of our communication lines with him. Before we can move up reinforcing encouragement and love to our overweight child, lonely and beleaguered by fear and self-dislike, we, too, have to reopen communication lines along which we can dispatch our constant and increasing supplies of reassurance.

The fact that this mother's daughter is hiding her candy-eating from her suggests that she may indeed need emotional reinforcements. If she did not fear her parent's disapproval, she would be eating her candy openly.

Until her fear of disapproval is removed, until she can feel that she can expose her hunger for sweets to her mother without arousing anxiety and reproach, the communication lines between her mother and herself will be blocked.

A DIET OF UNQUESTIONING LOVE

For some time now, the experts have been telling us that obesity is rooted in emotional difficulties, rather than physical onces. Since this knowledge has become more general, the parent of the fat child often suffers as much anxiety as the youngster over his condition. The child's pudginess cannot be hidden or disguised.

There it is, the "insecure" overweight, hinting to relatives and friends that Billy or Ellen are short-changed on home love, mother's "acceptance." If we do not get on to this fear of other people's criticism, our overweight youngster can become a threat to us.

The candy wrappers in the wastebasket will not move us to a rush of compassion for the little boy or girl who believes he must hide his need for comfort—but will be seen merely as new depressing evidence that we are inadequate parents.

Our concern becomes self-defense, not the defense of our child. Our need to justify ourselves may make us resort to all kinds of pressures to force him to release us from our uncomfortable position. We may try to criticize, "shame" or bribe him into self-control.

This is most mistaken of us. Until our overweight child has been fed a consistent, rich diet of unquestioning love over a period of time, we have no more right to expect him to forego his candy than we would have to expect a man on the top rung of a ladder to walk off into space.

As soon as our lonely little fighter with fear and self-dislike feels quietness, support and love in us, instead of anxiety and criticism, he will want to tell us how worried he is. The supply lines are clearing, and as he receives the real comfort he has been seeking, he will lose his craving for the false one. He himself will say, "Would you help me try to diet, mother?"

Wants Peterson

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Newbold Morris said last night he had offered Virgil W. Peterson, operating director of the Chicago Crime Commission, the post of chief counsel in the investigation of governmental corruption charges. In Chicago, Peterson declined comment. A 46-year-old former FBI man, Peterson has been serving since 1952 with the crime commission, a private agency. Morris said he made the offer yesterday and asked for a reply within three days. Morris, an Independent Republican and former president of the New York City Council, was named Attorney General McGrath last Friday to head the governmental probe.

8,431 Measles Cases

Albany, Feb. 8 (AP)—A total of 8,431 cases of measles was reported in upstate New York during January—a record for the month. The State Health Department said the January total compared with 1,586 upstate cases in January, 1951. The health department noted that the heaviest measles incidence usually came during the spring months. In April 1946, there were 15,909 cases reported and in April, 1949, there were 10,553 cases listed.

Rail Delay Record

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Total delays to Long Island Rail Road passenger trains last January amounted to 158 hours and 11 minutes, it was announced today by Chief Operating Officer J. Frank Doolan. The figure compares with 296 hours and 12 minutes in December—a reduction of nearly one-half.

Attorney St. John Named Counsel

Howard C. St. John, attorney with offices at 280 Wall street, has been appointed assistant counsel to the Joint Legislative Committee on Reapportionment by its chairman, Senator Pliny W. Williamson of Westchester county.

The duty of the committee is to reapportion the state's Congressional districts on the basis of population figures obtained in the 1950 census. The committee's head counsel is Robert Blakely of Westchester county.

St. John, a 1948 graduate of Albany Law School, was formerly associated with Cashin and Ewig of this city. He has maintained his own law office here since February, 1949. He will be able to continue the private practice of law here, his duties with the legislative committee being of a part-time nature.

See Stricter UMT Bill

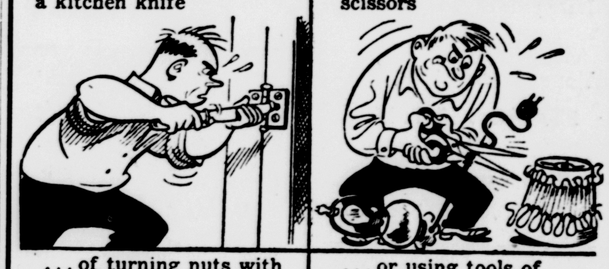

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—Senators said today they expect their armed services committee to approve a stricter Universal Military Training bill than that voted out by the House committee. Some Senate committmen said privately they favor a UMT bill that will permit both training and active service by 18 year olds. A bill fashioned by the House group provides for six months of basic training but bars additional active service unless Congress passes new legislation or the trainees ask it.

No Action Planned Against Three Boys

Three boys, arrested at Ashokan by state police Thursday morning, will be returned to a New York city institution and no action was planned against them here after it was learned that all three were minors under the age of 16.

Two of the boys had been arraigned as disorderly persons before Justice Frank Carle after they gave their ages as 16. Subsequent investigation disclosed that they are younger than the ages given, state police said.

The three were taken into custody by Corporal Ray Dunn of Phoenicia and Trooper E. Devine of Kingston at the Haver Garage at Ashokan where they were found sitting in a parked car.

School Conference Invited to Kingston

The New York State School Boards Association has been invited to hold a district conference in Kingston on May 5. This conference would be attended by some 100 educators from the area and is a local meeting held to supplement the annual meeting of the Association which was held in Syracuse and attended by the entire state membership. The annual meeting was attended by President Clarence Rowland and Trustee Chester A. Baltz.

A communication was recently received by Rowland from the association, following his letter to the association complimenting the association on its program at Syracuse and stating some facts in regard to the local school system and our local A Capella Choir.

Rowland was asked if Kingston would be interested in being host to the May meeting and also having the choir sing for the association at that meeting.

On motion of Trustee Leehive the board voted to extend an invitation to the association to hold its May meeting here. Kingston was selected because of its outstanding school reputation in the state. There would be a dinner and a conference in the evening.

Explosion at Camp

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 8 (AP) — A heavy explosion at the Farouk University training camp at Alexandria shook the surrounding area at midnight but best reports available in the port city said today there were no casualties.

American Indians used totem poles for tombstones as well as for idols. Ashes of cremated braves were placed in the poles.

Labor Dispute 'Stalls' House

This big stucco house being moved has been blocking traffic at an important St. Paul, Minn., intersection since Feb. 5, because of a labor dispute. The moving halted when firm doing the work employed some non-union workers. (AP Wirephoto).

Attorney St. John Named Counsel

Howard C. St. John, attorney with offices at 280 Wall street, has been appointed assistant counsel to the Joint Legislative Committee on Reapportionment by its chairman, Senator Pliny W. Williamson of Westchester county.

The duty of the committee is to reapportion the state's Congressional districts on the basis of population figures obtained in the 1950 census. The committee's head counsel is Robert Blakely of Westchester county.

St. John, a 1948 graduate of Albany Law School, was formerly associated with Cashin and Ewig of this city. He has maintained his own law office here since February, 1949. He will be able to continue the private practice of law here, his duties with the legislative committee being of a part-time nature.

See Stricter UMT Bill

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—Senators said today they expect their armed services committee to approve a stricter Universal Military Training bill than that voted out by the House committee. Some Senate committmen said privately they favor a UMT bill that will permit both training and active service by 18 year olds. A bill fashioned by the House group provides for six months of basic training but bars additional active service unless Congress passes new legislation or the trainees ask it.

No Action Planned Against Three Boys

Three boys, arrested at Ashokan by state police Thursday morning, will be returned to a New York city institution and no action was planned against them here after it was learned that all three were minors under the age of 16.

Two of the boys had been arraigned as disorderly persons before Justice Frank Carle after they gave their ages as 16. Subsequent investigation disclosed that they are younger than the ages given, state police said.

The three were taken into custody by Corporal Ray Dunn of Phoenicia and Trooper E. Devine of Kingston at the Haver Garage at Ashokan where they were found sitting in a parked car.

Costello Trial Set

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—After denying a defense plea for a two-months postponement yesterday, Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan set March 18 for the start of a new contempt trial of gambler Frank Costello. A previous trial ended in a jury deadlock.

School Conference Invited to Kingston

The New York State School Boards Association has been invited to hold a district conference in Kingston on May 5. This conference would be attended by some 100 educators from the area and is a local meeting held to supplement the annual meeting of the Association which was held in Syracuse and attended by the entire state membership. The annual meeting was attended by President Clarence Rowland and Trustee Chester A. Baltz.

A communication was recently received by Rowland from the association, following his letter to the association complimenting the association on its program at Syracuse and stating some facts in regard to the local school system and our local A Capella Choir.

Rowland was asked if Kingston would be interested in being host to the May meeting and also having the choir sing for the association at that meeting.

On motion of Trustee Leehive the board voted to extend an invitation to the association to hold its May meeting here. Kingston was selected because of its outstanding school reputation in the state. There would be a dinner and a conference in the evening.

GET READY FOR RAINY WEATHER

You might follow his time-proven pattern that it is well to be prepared for rainy days — especially in the matter of a roof over your head!

You'll find it tiresome to chase around catching those leaking drops in a pail — usually they don't drop in the same place twice, which is a very aggravating situation.

Why not phone 5656 today — and have us check over your Roof, Gutters, Leaders, and other rain-keeper-outers. We'll be very happy to look over your situation and give you an estimate for repairs, new installations, or a clean bill of health! (No charge for the latter service either!)
